The JC welcomes all amicus briefs and will likely accept updates as well. At least, we did for the Harlos matter, and I suspect we will do so for this one.

Dr. Ruwart,

I want to thank you for taking time to consider a relatively random email from a former State Chair, from a small and relatively inconsequential state. In the next few days, I will send my equivalent to an amicus brief on behalf of Mr. William Hinds and Dr. Amy LePore as the legitimate leadership of the Libertarian Party of Delaware.

In the mean time, though, I would like to mention that the home county affiliate for Mr. Will McVay, has established an investigative committee, preferred charges against, tried, found guilty, and subsequently suspended the membership of Mr. McVay based off of his actions in what he describes as "the plot" to take over the Libertarian Party of Delaware.

I imagine it's unconventional for a former State Chair to preface an amicus with their 'opponent's' point of view, but I think in this case, a review in their own words, of (<https://defense.lpdelaware.org/p/the-plot.html?m=1>) might provide some context and insight into the motivations and mindset of Mr. McVay and his peers. This site provides, in their own words, their justifications for doing the wrong things for what they perceived as the right reasons.

It is incredibly difficult to be in a position where I am placed between my convictions and relationships that I've built over the last decade in the cause of Liberty. I sincerely want to provide the JC with as objective a view as possible, which is why I wanted to provide the above background information for context. As stated, I intend to file a JC equivalent to an amicus brief in the next few days, but as the situation keeps developing, and information becomes more available, I wanted to provide the committee the most objective information possible.

Warmest regards, and your most obedient in Liberty,

Sean L. Goward

Former Chair

Libertarian Party of Delaware
