Our bodies are, at least in part, ourselves, and no other individual or organization, including government, can ever legitimately claim ownership or sovereignty over your body. Individuals have the freedom and responsibility to decide what they knowingly and voluntarily consume, and what risks they accept to their own health, finances, safety, or life. Braiman substitute 1.1 Self-ownership and Individual Responsibility Individuals own their bodies and have rights over them Individuals have the right to control their bodies that other individuals, groups, and governments may not violate. Individuals have the freedom and responsibility to decide what they knowingly and voluntarily consume, and what risks they accept to their own health, finances, safety, or life

	Separate Braiman proposal from list 1.10 Self-ownership and Individual Responsibility Individuals have inviolable rights over their own bodies, including to decide what risks they accept to their own life, health, and finances. Individuals should have a presumption of health, meaning freedom from ever having to prove they are healthy to avoid government restrictions of their rights, such as forced healthcare or wearing of protective gear. Responsibility for modifying behavior to protect against disease transmission lies foremost with those who wish to avoid getting infected, not with those who merely wish to go about and continue normal public activities. These do not in themselves constitute violence, aggression or fraud. Others who object to such activities have no right to personally commit violence, aggression, or fraud, nor to enlist government in the commission of the moral crime of prior restraint against individuals presumed innocent, merely to prevent a theoretical possibility of harm.

11:00PM	Announce Next Meeting Date and Adjournment

In Liberty,

Caryn Ann Harlos
