Stern endorses GOP candidate

The Washington Times reported that just about one week before the election, media personality Howard Stern, who had been the LP candidate for governor in New York before dropping out, endorsed GOP candidate George Pataki. According to the Times, Stern agreed to support the candidate after Pataki said he would make Stern an "unofficial adviser" on highways.

Election '94 highlights

- ✓ 2.3 million vote LP nationwide
- ✓ Ballot access result best ever
- ✓ 2 go to NH house
- ✓ 8 others elected nationwide
- ✓ LP U.S. Senate candidates get 648,000 votes
- ✓ LP message co-opted by old parties

The election

10 elected to office, records set

By RANDY LANGHENRY

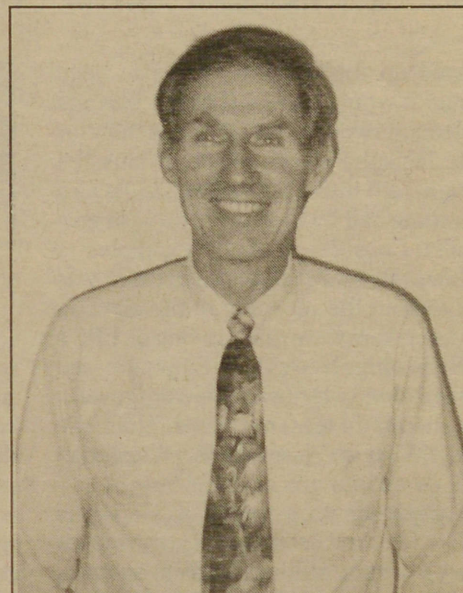

From New Hampshire to Arizona, Libertarians were caught under the wheels of a GOP steamroller, but the results left Libertarians generally upbeat.

Along with a record-setting ballot access outcome, seven Libertarian Party candidates were elected to office and three were re-elected.

In addition, more than 2.3 million people across the country voted for Libertarian candidates. The LP's 15 U.S. Senate candidates received almost 650,000 votes, a total rivaling the record 1 million votes the 20 LP U.S. Senate candidates received in 1992. This year about 72 million people voted, while in 1992 about 104 million people voted.

Ballot access expert and LP "election historian" Richard Winger pointed out that in the 1992 election, while 100 percent of the nation's voters had an opportunity to vote for an LP candidate running for the most important office on the ballot, meaning president, only .3 percent did so. This year saw a significant increase, with about 65 percent of the voters having the opportunity to vote for an LP candidate at the top of the ticket, 1.7 percent did so.

Re-elected to office were three prominent Libertarian officeholders: Don Gorman, New Hampshire House of Representatives; Bonnie

Jim McClarin

New Hampshire State Representative

Flickinger, Moreno Valley City Council, California; and Sandi Webb, Simi Valley City Council, California.

Ballot access

LP position good for 50 in 1996

By RANDY LANGHENRY

The Libertarian Party came out of the November elections in better shape than ever on the ballot access front.

"We made tremendous strides in the area of ballot access," said LP National Chair Steve Dasbach. "It's going to make a tremendous difference for 1996."

The Libertarian Party is assured ballot status for 1996 in "22 states, which is a record for us," said Richard Winger, nationally recognized ballot access expert and editor of Ballot Access News. "We've never even been on in 20 [states] before, right after any elections," he said. After the 1992 elections, the LP was on the ballot in 19 states, which was the previous best.

The Libertarian Party picked up ballot status in four states—Indiana, Wyoming, Massachusetts, and Michigan—and lost only one, Utah. Winger said Utah was not a problem, since gathering only 500 signatures will get the LP back on the positive side.

The results are important because "Indiana and Wyoming are terribly difficult, so those are the two most dramatic gains," explained Winger.

In South Dakota, the LP had never before pulled enough votes to stay on the ballot—2-1/2 percent is needed—and this year Nathan Barton received 4 percent in the race for governor. In 1992, the state did not apply the vote test against the LP, so technically ballot access there is not a gain.

"Oh, Wyoming was so wonderful," said Winger. "We needed 3 percent for Congress and Dave Dawson got 6 percent. That was so great, because our candidates for governor and U.S. Senator didn't get the 3 percent. The one race that counted is the one race we got it in."

In Indiana, the LP needed 2 percent of the vote in the race for secretary of state, and Steve Dillon got 2.16 percent. "That was a squeaker," said Winger. "All the luck was good. Compare that to the Grassroots Party in Minnesota where any party needs 5 percent in a statewide race, and they got 4.9 percent in a race."

It is also possible that the LP will be certified in Illinois, pending the outcome of a court hearing. The total needed for ballot status is 5 percent in any statewide race, which gives the party ballot status for statewide offices only. That, however, would include a presidential primary in

The message

By RANDY LANGHENRY

Voters across the nation embraced the Libertarian message of smaller government and lower taxes, but in most cases this year the beneficiary of the support was the Republican Party. But there was a lot of good news for the Libertarian Party.

Looking at the election from an ideological perspective, Libertarian Party National Chair Steve Dasbach said, "This election is being interpreted as a move in a Libertarian direction. If you look at what the Republicans say the election means, they are all talking about cutting back the size of government, the intrusiveness of government. I mean, I'm highly skeptical that the Republicans will actually do anything to cut back government, but clearly that's what they believe the people wanted."

Both Republican and Democratic pundits agree that the voters were sending a message to Washington, and it wasn't just that they want Republicans in office.

"I really don't think the issue was Republican vs. Democrat so much as the people vs. government," said see Message on page 8

Victory for libertarianism

LP must be ready for exodus from old parties

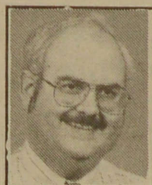

Based on the news reports I've been reading, it would appear that the November elections were a resounding victory for libertarianism. Pundits and politicians, left and right, are interpreting the results as a resounding call by the voters for less government. Consider just a few examples:

- Linda Dival, a Republican pollster, was talking about the meaning of the election and what voters were really saying on PBS's MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour. She expressed the view that voters were saying government should do less, not more. Then she added, "What we're seeing is a libertarian streak come into this election."

- Larry J. Sabato, a scholar of campaigns and elections and professor of government at the University of Virginia, from an Associated Press article: "... the conservative wave now sweeping the country also has a libertarian edge to it. 'Don't tread on me, anti-government, leave the individual alone, to the extent possible.'"

- Another Associated Press article: "(Tennessee Senator-elect) Frist declared the elections to be a strong public demand for libertarian principles. 'The Tennesseans, and most Americans, are fed up with government on their backs, in their pockets and on their farms,' Frist said in an interview conducted by U.S. News and World Report over the CompuServe network."

- And finally, Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour: "The voters have responded by rejecting Clinton's agenda and embracing Republican ideas of smaller government, not larger; lower taxes, not higher; and more individual freedom and personal responsibility, not more government power and government responsibility."

So does that mean that we should close up shop and go become Republicans? Hardly. After all, we've seen Republicans talk like Libertarians before. Frankly, I'm highly skeptical that Republicans will actually do much to really cut the size, power, expense, and intrusiveness of government. Is Robert Dole really going to eliminate farm subsidies? Is Robert Dornan really going to stop trying to legislate private morality? Will the Republicans actually submit a balanced budget to Clinton, end the income tax, repeal the Brady Bill and the ban on semi-automatic weapons? And, is there any hope that they will realize that big government's attempts at Prohibition are the leading cause of the crime wave they say they are committed to ending?

Voters cast a resounding vote of disapproval for the Democrats. However, they are justifiably skeptical that the Republicans will do any better. According to post-election polls, more than 60 percent expect politics as usual from the GOP. What will happen if the Republicans fail to deliver less government, or worse, try to implement the agenda of the intolerant right? Newt Gingrich seems to understand what's likely to happen: "Let me say one last thing. If this just degenerates after an historic election back into the usual baloney of politics in Washington and pettiness in Washington, then the American people I believe will move towards a third party in a massive way. I think they are fed up with this city, they are fed up with its games, they are fed up with petty partisanship."

We have to continue building a strong Libertarian Party to prepare for that exodus. We also have to keep the Republicans' feet to the fire to fulfill their mandate to cut government. After all, why are the Republicans interpreting this as a libertarian mandate, rather than a mandate for the agenda of the intolerant right? Consider the lengths they went to to keep us from competing with them:

- George Pataki and the Republicans used every legal maneuver available to try to keep us off the ballot in New York. Fortunately, they failed.

- Republicans tried everything they could think of to get Don Ernsberger out of the race against Rick Santorum in Pennsylvania. When that failed, Santorum was forced to take a more libertarian stance on the issues.

- Republicans even pressed their friends at the NRA into running attack ads against Jon Coon in Michigan, who had focused his campaign on restoring our right to keep and bear arms—all to help elect a Republican candidate who never even mentions the issue.

Thanks to the efforts of our candidates in this election, we begin the 1996 election cycle stronger than ever before. We gained ballot status in at least five states, with a sixth (Illinois) requiring a lawsuit. That puts us about a year ahead of where we were four years ago.

By redoubling our efforts, we can be ready when the voters realize that the Republicans haven't given them what they voted for. When they are ready to "move to a third party in a massive way," there will be a strong Libertarian Party ready to welcome them.

"Behind Your Back: What Do Other People Really Say About You And Your Libertarian Ideas?"

"Dear Michael,

"Behind Your Back: What do the people you talk to really say about you and your Libertarian ideas? After I leave a conversation and walk out of the room, what do they really say about me and my Libertarian ideas?"

"This question has been bugging me since 1991. In 1993, I bought your Essence of Political Persuasion tapes. Within 14 days, the people I talked with started asking me to tell them more about libertarianism, agreeing with me more often and treating me nicer. I got compliments!

"Okay, to my face, people seemed to react dramatically better when I used your Political Persuasion formats and approaches. But what were they really saying behind my back?"

"I decided to put your tapes to the test. I and two libertarian friends (one woman and one man) started regularly attending libertarian events, meetings and speeches. We also went to "mixed" parties (Parties that had libertarians and non-libertarians). We'd split up, and eavesdrop (Yeah, spy!) on conversations. We were listening for libertarians who were presenting libertarianism or arguing it. We just listened and waited until the libertarian left the group. Then we naively asked the non-libertarians what they thought of the ideas and how they felt about the libertarian who just left.

"Then we did the same thing with me using your Essence of Political Persuasion and one of my friends standing quietly by during my comments and discussion. I'd excuse myself. Then, after I left, my friend would innocently ask what the non-libertarian listeners thought of my ideas and how they felt toward me.

"We did this Behind-The-Back Test at 41 different gatherings, with 74 different (unsuspecting) libertarians (including 6 nationally known libertarians) in 138 different conversations. We did the Behind-The-Back Test with me using your Persuasion methods at the same 41 gatherings, in 87 different conversations.

"I mainly used your 'Political Cross-Dressing', 'Intellectual Judo', 'Rapport Recipes' and 'Words Are Weapons, Words Are Tools'.

"Michael, although I had 51 fewer conversations than my fellow libertarians (87 vs 138), your Essence of Political Persuasion got me 14 TIMES AS MANY POSITIVE REACTIONS TO OUR LIBERTARIAN POSITIONS and 27 TIMES AS MANY FAVORABLE FEELINGS TOWARD ME.

"Imagine convincing 14 times as many people about libertarianism and having 27 times as many people really like you.

"Michael, I tested it. I proved it. I did it. If it works for me, it'll work for every other libertarian.

"How convinced am I? Here's $89.85 for 3 more sets of The Essence of Political Persuasion.

Divorced Mother Gets Job

"Dear Michael,

"...although I have been a homemaker for the last eight years, my divorce made it necessary for me to go back to work. Whenever I felt like 'Why Me?' or 'It isn't fair!', I'd listen to your Self-Responsibility tape, and start making choices and taking action.

"I used your rapport techniques, 'Intellectual Judo' and 'Isolate the Concern' to get a job selling Toyotas. (I have never sold anything, anywhere to anyone 'til now.)

"My first month, I earned $1,700. Then I started listening to your Persuasion tapes during my drive to work and on the way home for 6 solid weeks.

"Michael, my second month, I earned $4,300. I earned $5,800 my third month - and won the Salesperson of the Month award for my dealership.

"Your Essence of Political Persuasion training tapes helped me regain my self-esteem, earn a good income and support my son and daughter.

"Michael, you saved my life."

Shy Libertarian Gives Speeches

"Dear Michael,

"I used to be the shy guy who quietly sat through libertarian meetings. Since I started using your Persuasion Tapes, my communications skills and self-confidence have skyrocketed. I joined Toastmasters, and practiced 'Political Cross-Dressing' and 'Reverse Macho Flashing' from your Essence of Political Persuasion on them.

"Now I'm giving libertarian speeches to Service Clubs in my town.

"I used to be Clark Kent. Now I'm faster than Brady Bill bullets, more powerful than an Amtrack locomotive, and able to leap IRS buildings at a single bound."

1-900 Libertarian Phone Sex?

"Dear Michael,

"The libertarian movement is like 1-900 phone sex. We spend hours talking with people about all the amazing things we're going to do, what it's going to be like and how good it'll feel. We spend hours Liber-teasing each other until we get our fantasy release.

"I'm married. My wife and I have a young daughter. Being a good husband and a good daddy to our little girl takes commitment and work. But I wouldn't trade one minute of my marriage or my family life for any amount of phone fantasy talk.

"I want real individual freedom in my life time. Your Essence of Political Persuasion audio tapes have given me the skills and confidence to bring more people into the libertarian movement and get them active.

"I'm fed up with liber-fantasy. I want liber-reality. We can't lose with the stuff you use. Your Persuasion tapes are the shortest distance between 2 minds."

Captain Convinces Commander

"Dear Michael,

"The other night, at a social event, I got into a conversation with fellow officers over foreign policy. My Commanding Officer overheard our discussion and joined in.

"I used your 'Welfare Pigeons' and other Self-Responsibility ideas, 'Political Cross-Dressing', and turned your 'Welfare Junkies' Metaphor into a 'Warfare Junkies' Metaphor. We talked for a couple of hours.

"A few weeks later, I ran into my Commanding Officer at another gathering. He waved me over to his table and introduced me to his guests as the man who had convinced him that Europe should pay for its own defense. He then repeated my persuasive case for his guests. We had an interesting, thoughtful discussion.

"By using your persuasion methods, I was able to change the mind of a man in a position of authority. Please tell your readers that they can change the minds of leaders, centers of influence, professionals, bosses and others in positions of authority. All they need is your Persuasion Tapes and a little practice."

Candidates use OSS and PHC in campaigns

Libertarian candidates across the country used Operation Safe Streets and Project Healthy Choice as "powerful and effective" campaign tools in the 1994 election, according to the national LP office.

"We've had reports from all across the country about successful use of these projects," said National Director Perry Willis, who is coordinating the Operation Safe Streets (OSS) effort from the LP's Washington, DC, headquarters.

"From Don Ernsberger's nationally broadcast debate in Pennsylvania [for U.S. Senate] to Scott Kjar's state representative campaign in Nevada to the John Buttrick campaign for governor in Arizona, Libertarians are using OSS and PHC to promote Libertarian solutions," reported Willis.

Noting that the national office had sent information about PHC and OSS to all 662 LP candidates, Willis said, "These projects allowed our candidates to become 'instant experts' on the issues of crime and health care reform. Libertarian candidates were able to go before voters with solid, well-researched, innovative solutions to these problems, while Republicans and Democrats continued to parrot the same old tired big-government rhetoric. I think these powerful and effective campaign tools contributed to increased vote totals—and increased credibility."

In other PHC and OSS news:

- Project Healthy Choice received its widest radio exposure last month when Dr. Nancy Lord appeared on the Doug Steffin radio show—syndicated on almost 100 stations across the U.S.—on Oct. 18.

Lord said she discussed the LP's proposals, as well as "what they [the Clinton Administration] might do next year that is more subtle and sinister."

- National Director Willis traveled to Maryland on Oct. 15 to give a "how-to" presentation to state LP activists entitled "How State Parties Can Use OSS to Grow."

"I received an enthusiastic response from the audience," reported Willis. "I got a lot of questions, and a lot of favorable comments about OSS."

- Willis also said that the national LP must "reexamine" its plans to run pro-Second Amendment advertisements on the syndicated Gene Burns program, following the surprise resignation of the popular Libertarian radio talk show host last month. Burns abruptly resigned from his flagship station, WOR in New York City, on Oct. 26, reportedly because of a dispute over program content.

- New Hampshire LP activist Doug Harrigan used OSS "ammunition" to score points on a televised debate on marijuana legalization on Oct. 12. In a four-way panel discussion with a police detective, a representative from the state office of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention, and a law professor, Harrigan displayed a blow-up of the OSS chart which shows the close relation between drug and alcohol prohibition and the murder rate in the U.S.

"I ended strong by showing that chart. That piece of ammunition was crucial to making the point that prohibition increases crime—not decreases crime. It was very valuable," Harrigan said.

How Do You Use an Informational Campaign to Build the Party?

When you're running for office and the primary purpose is to promote the party and build membership, how do you get the media to take you seriously? How should you talk to the average voter about libertarian issues? How do you effectively announce your candidacy? How should you set up your campaign? What think tanks can help you formulate issues? Can you be effective in your spare time?

The answers to these questions, insights into building a party, and 100 tips to help your campaign are all contained in a new manual, How to Have Fun Losing Your Race for Congress. In this easy-to-read manual, written by Gene A. Cisewski, a veteran of 20 years in the political arena, you'll discover what you have to do to be effective in your spare time. You'll get practical, real-world advice that will make you look good to the public. This manual is great for people running for federal or state office on a partisan ticket. Already these manuals are helping Libertarian candidates in New Hampshire, California, Virginia, Maryland, and Wisconsin.

New Libertarian Party officeholders include Jim McClarin, New Hampshire House of Representatives; Steve Ziegler, Charles County Board of Education, Maryland; Dan Gallegos, Regional Transportation District Board, Colorado; Tom Jamerson, Chesterfield County Soil and Water Commission, Virginia; Daniel Walker and Dick Bjornseth, Ochlockonee Soil and Water Conservation District Board, Florida; and David Morris, Advisory Neighborhood Commission, Washington, DC.

In addition, Sidney Much was appointed to the Terra Linda Local School Board in Oregon the day before the election.

In New Hampshire, where prior to the election the Libertarian Party had four members in the state house, two incumbents—Finlay Rothhaus and Andy Borsa—were not re-elected. A third incumbent,

Don Gorman

New Hampshire State Representative

Calvin Warburton, did not seek re-election.

Newly-elected New Hampshire state house member Jim McClarin said that although the losses were a "setback, they were a readily explained setback." McClarin said that "all the voters wanted to do was pull that Republican lever, in many cases."

Libertarian House Leader Don Gorman, however, said "the Libertarians really have to start looking in the mirror. It's too easy to blame Clinton or the Republicans—that doesn't do any good. It think the Libertarians are going to take a real hard look at themselves and never mind this Republican sweep routine."

Gorman admitted that the Republican sweep played a part in re-electing only two Libertarians, but he said, "First of all, we have to say we can't blame anybody in the world but us, and that's a tough stand to take right there. Having reached that, then you are on your way."

Gorman also said "it was little early to tell" just what role the Libertarian Party delegation would play in the next state house session. Gorman plans to sit down with the house speaker and "negotiate our best position," he said.

He also noted that the Democratic Party also took a pretty big hit in this election in the state house, and that because of attrition, the power of the Republican leadership has also left somewhat of a vacuum.

"I'm still chomping at the bit," Gorman said. "I'm still rarin' to go. I'm still a Libertarian voice out there, and they are going to hear it—and they know it."

Along with keeping a Libertarian delegation, albeit a small one, in the New Hampshire state house, the other good news was that LP gubernatorial candidate Steve Winter received 4.5 percent of the vote, retaining the LP's "major party" status. This insures a presidential primary in 1996 in the state.

The fortunes of other LP candidates across the country offered mixed results.

In Arizona, LP candidate Scott Grainger received 7 percent of the vote, easily beating an LP record in U.S. Senate races. And the LP gained the attention of the older parties. "They [the LP] became very visible, and people are recognizing them," said Dodie Londen, head of the state Republican Party in a story in the Arizona Republic.

In California, Guy Wilson, candidate for U.S. House, competed in a two-way race against indicted incumbent Rep. Walter Tucker III. On a shoestring budget, Wilson was able to garner 22 percent of the vote, lower than had been hoped.

Also in California, Santee City Council candidate Steve Green received 4,754 votes, but lost a seat on the council by only 119 votes.

In Georgia, LP candidates set new state election records. Sharon Harris, candidate for agriculture commissioner, got more than 300,000 votes, 23 percent, in her two-way race against an entrenched incumbent. Her vote total was the highest any third-party candidate for state office has received in the 20th century in the state.

Also in Georgia, Larry Bolin received 32 percent of the vote in his two-way race for the state house. His total was also the highest for any third party state legislature candidate in the state in this century. Bolin accomplished this feat while running against a four-term Democratic incumbent so powerful he had never even been challenged before.

Bolin also won a precinct in Gwinnett County, a small part of which is in his district, the first time the state party has ever won a precinct, and also won an outright majority of the same county's votes.

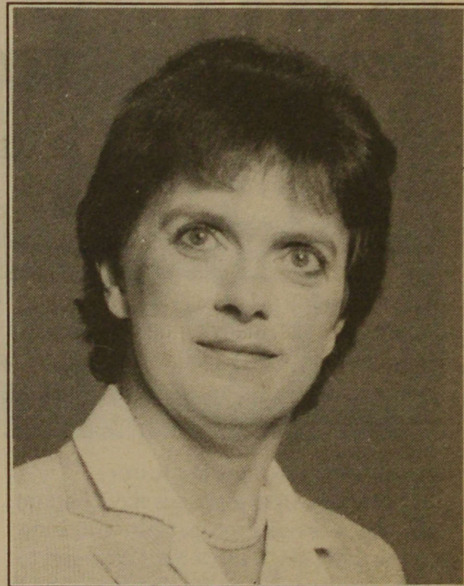

"We've only been running statewide candidates in Georgia for six years, and our campaigns this year were conducted on shoestring budgets compared to the huge coffers of the two older parties," said LP state chair Montague Boyd. "Yet our campaigns not only set significant new state records, they were conducted with a new level of professionalism. We've laid the groundwork for future growth, and we're already eagerly looking forward to 1996."

In Michigan, Jon Coon, LP candidate for U.S. Senate, received 4.5 percent of the vote, after last-minute ads were run against the Coon campaign urging gun owners to vote for the Republican candidate and not to "waste" their vote on the Libertarian.

In Missouri, Bill Johnson received more than 88,000 votes, 5 percent, in his U.S. Senate campaign. This was a significant increase over the 3.1 percent the LP candidate for the U.S. Senate got in 1992.

All Missouri Libertarian Party candidates received more votes this year than in 1992.

"Here in the St. Louis area the LP candidates definitely had a Libertarian effect on the campaign rhetoric of the Democrats and Republicans," said Ken Bush, local LP campaign consultant. "With the presence of an LP candidate on the panel the other two parties' candidates spoke of the sovereignty of the individual, the Founding Fathers' vision of self-reliance and less government, and the blessings of liberty."

Bonnie Flickinger

Moreno Valley (CA) City Councilmember

Two closely watched state assembly races in Nevada ended with somewhat disappointing results—Paul Pratt received 27 percent of the vote, and Scott Kjar got 6 percent.

In Ohio, Jim Berns received 17.4 percent of the vote in his race for state house. Two weeks before the election, Berns had been endorsed by The Cincinnati Enquirer. "The most knowledgeable candidate is Libertarian Jim Berns, the tax fighter who has run for a dozen offices just to drive home the message that less government is better government," the Enquirer wrote.

Don Ernsberger, LP candidate for U.S. Senate in Pennsylvania, received 1.7 percent of the vote. Ernsberger had been widely praised for his performance in a nationally-televised debate.

In Texas, John Hawley, LP candidate for associate justice of the State Supreme Court, received nearly 600,000 votes.

The results in other closely watched Libertarian Party races included: Mike Hurley for state house in Missouri, 23 percent; John Reda for state house in Delaware, 18 percent; Robert Heitner for Sussex County Freeholder in New Jersey, 19 percent; and Terry Savage for state assembly in California, 6.9 percent.

LP National Director Perry Willis said the election outcome "demonstrates the absolute essential nature of building up a strong membership base, a constituency for liberty, if we are going to be able to compete for votes."

Willis said he believes the LP needs to re-orient campaigns toward membership recruitment. Willis said if he were campaigning he would "give an introduction to libertarianism once a month, and I would set my campaign workers trying, in a very confined area, to identify potential libertarians."

Willis said he would then mail invitations to these potential Libertarians and invite them to come to the introduction, meet a Libertarian candidate, and have their questions answered.

"I would do that month after month after month," said Willis.

The 1996 elections are only 23 months away.

THE ECONOMIC MEANS TO FREEDOM Is Vastly More Effective When Coupled With THE POLITICAL MEANS TO EDUCATE

THE POLITICAL MEANS

- The Libertarian Party and other freedom organizations and publications have done a phenomenal job to educate a significant percentage of the public about liberty.
- Many individual Libertarians have made substantial contributions in the form of time, money, and effort to the cause of liberty.
- In the process, many of them have built substantial personal networks of liberty-loving friends and contacts.
- Individual Libertarians have helped create a group of liberty-lovers numbering tens of millions.
- We believe that this group can inspire a worldwide freedom revolution within a few years.

However, if you get bogged down in devoting yourself to only the political means to freedom, you may expend large amounts of time, effort, and money with only a vague hope of achieving some degree of limited freedom in the distant future. Generally, the political means involve fighting negatives.

THE ECONOMIC MEANS

On the other hand, if you choose to combine the economic means to freedom with the political means, you can start reaping the benefits almost immediately. Right now you can immediately expand your degree of freedom under your own control. You can quickly enjoy monetary profits and other benefits from your efforts. The economic means involve creating positives — building freedom and prosperity for yourself, your family, and friends.

Terra Libra provides you with the opportunity to combine political and economic means in order to reap substantial rewards immediately.

The specific steps you might have to take to implement the economic means to freedom can be classified under 10 broad categories:

1. Prepare yourself;
2. Develop additional and multiple income streams;
3. Start using private, secure, real free-enterprise banking services;
4. Transform unproductive activities in your life;
5. Reduce or eliminate illegal taxes on an individual basis;
6. Protect your income and assets;
7. Create your personal freedom network and expand it;
8. Learn more about marketing;
9. Become a free-enterprise entrepreneur;
10. Improve your health.

Exactly what you may have to do in the context of each of the categories, you need to determine for yourself. Terra Libra is involved in providing you with information, products, and services — as well as contacts and alternative free-enterprise institutions — that make it easier for you to take your next step.

THE "TERRA LIBRA SHIFT"

We identify three economic sectors: 1. public sector (operates on fraud and coercion); 2. private sector (most ly in bed with, and finances, the public sector); and 3. free-enterprise sector (private property, voluntary exchange, sanctity of contract).

Terra Libra is the free-enterprise sector of the world. The economic shift from the public and private sectors to the free-enterprise sector we call the "Terra Libra Shift." We predict that several pioneers of the Terra Libra Shift will become millionaires and billionaires within the next decade.

A solid foundation is being laid to bring about a massive acceleration of the "Terra Libra Shift." Many of the basic elements of the "free-enterprise foundation" are now in place — at least in embryonic form. Step-by-step we are building and expanding this foundation. We are gradually putting the pieces together one by one. Every piece we add to the overall structure adds to our credibility and strength, and makes it easier for us to add the next piece. Terra Libra has already developed unstoppable momentum.

During the next decade there will be a massive shift of resources from the public and private sectors to the free-enterprise sector — a shift from the hands of the tyrants and their lackeys into the hands of the free. This Terra Libra Shift is the primary determinant of future freedom. It will bring about the colloapse of tyrants — as went the Berlin Wall and the Soviet Union.

1. Prepare Yourself

From the rest of this report and from the items we offer here, the exact steps you need to take may become clearer to you. Terra Libra is becoming spectacularly successful, significant numbers of people are doing the things we recommend, and many of them are beginning to reap the rewards. Information on some outstanding examples will be included with your order. Terra Libra is already at the stage where other people are implementing our principles — and profiting handsomely.

Practically all these people involved with Terra Libra started by ordering our three basic items: 1. The Terra Libra Introductory Package; 2. The Economic Rape of America: What You Can Do About It; 3. Wake Up America! The Dynamics of Human Power.

The Introductory Package contains the basic ideas that make Terra Libra such a powerful human societal breakthrough. These are the basic ideas that have inspired several businesses to completely reorganize and restructure their organizations to take them out of the private sector (with its crippling taxes and regulations) into the free-enterprise sector — which is Terra Libra.

The Introductory Package also contains the basic ideas that inspired its founders to launch World Trade Clearinghouse. This could become a multi-million grams-AU business within a year or so. All the capital necessary to launch WTC came from Terra Librans.

The Economic Rape of America analyzes the federal reserve system, the IRS and taxation in general, the U.S. Constitution, government in general, the role of the legal profession, and several crucial related topics. Economic Rape provides you with a deep understanding of politics and economics. With this understanding you'll know that all attempts to change current political-economic systems will become vastly more effective when coupled with the economic means we advocate and practice. This new radically different alternative approach is vital.

This new approach is to build freedom, rather than fight tyranny. Most people lack the knowledge and personal power necessary to step out of the current system and recreate their lives and/or businesses in the free-enterprise sector. Wake Up America! The Dynamics of Human Power provides you with the knowledge and inspiration to take the first steps into Terra Libra — the free-enterprise sector.

2. Develop Additional and Multiple Income Streams

With your order you'll receive extensive information on how to do this — a fortune is waiting for you!

3. Start Using Private, Secure, Real Free-Enterprise Banking Services

World Trade Clearinghouse (WTC) has been established to make this possible and practical. You can develop an additional income stream by promoting WTC, which has the advantage that it's not ideological. Because of the practical benefits provided by WTC, it can be promoted to anyone, irrespective of whether they're interested in freedom or not.

100% GOLD-BACKED MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE

World Trade Clearinghouse, Ltd (WTC), a new financial clearinghouse system, is bringing to the world market an alternative medium of exchange. It provides individuals and businesses the following benefits:

- A medium of exchange which is 100% backed by gold — does away with fractional reserve banking and its perils
- Security and safety of transaction assets
- Privacy
- Liquidity
- Integration with the existing economic system
- Expansion of economic productivity and activity on a global basis
- Competitive advantages in the marketplace
- Economic boycotting of counterproductive systems and parties
- Shift of economic support to the real free market

All transactions take place through a sophisticated

Democratic pollster Natalie Davis. "The voters are saying, 'Back to basics.'"

"The vote wasn't so much a pro-Republican vote as it was a change-the-way-Congress-works vote," said Republican pollster Ed Goeas. "People decided it was so messed up that unless you correct the process the Congress was never going to be able to effectively deal with problems. I don't think they would worry about cleaning house again if they don't think Washington got the message."

Even Georgia Rep. Newt Gingrich, who will be the new House speaker in January, said, "If this just degenerates after an historic election back into the usual baloney of politics in Washington and pettiness in Washington, then the American people, I believe, will move towards a third party in a massive way."

Other political experts also recognized the libertarian streak in this year's campaigns.

"The referendum process was part of the voter rebellion that we saw at the polls," said Larry Sabato, a recognized expert on campaigns and professor of government at the University of Virginia.

While some issues were clearly more conservative in tone, term limits, criminal justice measures, and the immigration measure, there was also the defeat of the two anti-gay initiatives in Idaho and Oregon. "That says to me that the conservative wave now sweeping the country also has a libertarian edge to it. 'Don't tread on me, anti-government, leave the individual alone, to the extent possible,'" he said.

The Republican Party's "much-ballyhooed 'Contract with America' promises that they will simultaneously cut taxes, increase military spending, and balance the budget," said LP founder David F. Nolan. "Pardon my reasonable doubt."

And Nolan is certainly not the only one to doubt that the Republicans will turn things around in Washington. A poll taken after the election by Republican pollster Frank Luntz showed that 42 percent of the respondents said neither party will "clean up the mess in Washington." And 73 percent agreed that "the federal government is too big and has too much power." Even two-thirds of those who voted for Clinton two years ago think that.

Nolan said that while some Republicans were sincere in their promises, "for most of them it was simply campaign rhetoric."

Nolan doesn't think many of the promises will really be kept. "Oh sure, there will be a few token cuts in some of the more egregious social welfare programs," said Nolan. But he said he doesn't believe there will be any "real reduction in federal spending, and the national debt will continue to rise."

And Nolan also warned that since the GOP will be unable to do much on the economic front, "the new GOP majority will turn its energies to enforcing right-wing social values. They may not be able to cut your taxes, but by God, they can crack down on abortionists, pornographers, drug dealers, etc."

Nolan said there may be a few changes for the better—tax code revisions, a cut back of regulatory excesses, maybe even a move to term limits—but "the millennium has not yet arrived, either literally or figuratively."

Nolan noted that "perhaps the most important outcome of the 1994 'sea change' is that the political landscape has changed significantly. If they play their cards right, the Republicans can now legitimately claim to be the political center, leaving the Democrats stranded on the left/authoritarian side. Libertarians, Constitutional Conservatives, and other true advocates of shrinking the role of government can then come in on the Republicans' other flank, to hasten the inevitable realignment that will culminate in the Fourth American Revolution somewhere around the year 2004."

If this just degenerates after an historic election back into the usual baloney of politics in Washington and pettiness in Washington, then the American people, I believe, will move towards a third party in a massive way.

— Rep. Newt Gingrich

1996. The argument with the state is over how to calculate the percentage vote for trustee of the state university. Voters get to vote for three of the candidates, so the percentage should be figured by how many people cast ballots, not by the total number of votes cast. LP candidate Robin Miller received more than 200,000 votes, which should figure to about 8.5 percent.

According to Winger, "In 1948, the Illinois State Supreme Court ruled in favor of another third party in Progressive Party v. Flynn, and so the precedent is on our side. It should be a trump for us." According to Winger, similar challenges have happened in the past, but each time the challenge was taken to the federal court, when the argument should properly have been taken to the state court. "If there's any justice, we'll win," he said.

In Massachusetts, secretary of state candidate Peter C. Everett's 71,000 votes, giving him 4 percent of the total in that race, give the Libertarian Party major-party status there. Major-party status means that the LP has legal status equal to that of the Democratic and Republican parties. In 1996, the LP will be entitled to a primary election, and a reserved place on the ballot for its candidate for president.

"This is a great day for Massachusetts voters and the Libertarian Party," exclaimed Everett upon learning the results of his race. "Now the real work of party-building lies ahead. We need to start laying the groundwork for 1996 by building membership, recruiting candidates, and proving to the voters that we provide a serious and valuable alternative to the two incumbent parties."

Previously, Libertarians had to collect 40,000 validated signatures to get a statewide candidate on the ballot. In 1990, the Fair Ballot Access law reduced the number to 10,000. The same law also allowed any statewide race to qualify a party for major party status, where before only the gubernatorial race would qualify.

In New York, although LP gubernatorial candidate Bob Schulz did not get the 50,000 votes needed to achieve ballot status for the LP, the lawsuit that Schulz filed prior to the election was successful in overturning certain petitioning requirements. According to Winger, this ruling will greatly reduce the effort needed to put the LP back on the ballot in 1996.

In New Hampshire, LP gubernatorial candidate Steve Winter got 4.4 percent of the vote, retaining major-party status for the LP there.

The ballot access victories this year put the LP in an excellent position for 1996. Concern over the changing of the date of the LP's 1996 presidential nominating convention, to July 1996, now focuses mainly on three states, Florida, West Virginia, and Maine.

LP Ballot Access Committee Chair Bill Redpath said plans already are being made to deal with those states. Redpath said the Libertarian Party is still on track for 50-state ballot access for the 1996 elections.

High Court lets debate decision stand

On Nov. 7, 1994, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal of Arkansas Educational Television, which was fighting for the right to discriminate against third-party and independent candidates in debates that it sponsors. The case was Arkansas Educational TV v. Forbes, no. 94-490.

This means that in the 8th Circuit, public television is bound by that decision. The 8th Circuit includes Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Nebraska.

It also means that the Forbes decision will be influential in the rest of the nation, since it has the prestige of having resisted reversal by the U.S. Supreme Court. However, there is a contrary 1990 precedent in the 11th Circuit, so the Forbes decision cannot prevail in Florida, Georgia, or Alabama, which are in the 11th Circuit.

Even before the U.S. Supreme Court action on Nov. 7, a Michigan state court followed the Forbes decision and ordered WKAR, a public television station, to invite all candidates to debate, not just the Democrat and Republican. The suit was brought by Jon Coon, Libertarian Party candidate for U.S. Senate.

Two other lawsuits are pending on the same issue in federal court. Both of them were brought by Libertarian candidates. In Nevada, the suit was brought by Bob Days, LP candidate for U.S. Senate. In Texas, LP gubernatorial candidate Keary Ehlers filed suit in federal court against television station KERA.

In announcing the lawsuit, Ehlers said, "Reluctantly, I have been persuaded that it's necessary to defend my Constitutional rights, and the right of all Texans to a fair, impartial forum, in the courts."

Ehlers said that despite his campaign's "best efforts to convince KERA of their obligation to the public... they have so far refused to do their moral, ethical, and legal duty."

In Ballot Access News, editor Richard Winger noted that it was a good year for third-party and independent candidates getting in debates. Winger said those candidates were able to debate both major party opponents in at least 13 states in governor races, 10 states in U.S. Senate races, and five states in congressional-at-large races.

NOW! Available to Americans...

EUROPEAN SMART DRUGS!

You don't have to wait for the FDA to "approve" new memory and intelligence enhancing therapies. For your personal use, you can obtain therapies that can:

- Enhance mental function four times better than Hydergine!
- Increase mental energy, concentration, and alertness!
- Maximize the ability to memorize facts, figures, and scientific findings!
- Increase learning, mental agility, and I.Q.
- Improve test scores leading to higher grades and work productivity.
- Prevent and treat degenerative brain diseases including Alzheimer's Disease, Parkinson's Disease, etc.

The Life Extension Foundation has the sources, the doctors, and the information to enable Americans to obtain life extension drugs from around the world. These drugs have been safely used in France, Germany and other countries for years, but until now, have been denied to Americans.

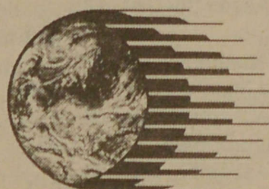

Europeans are using these drugs to improve their mental condition to unprecedented levels. Now Americans can gain access to advanced life extension therapies such as piracetam, centrophoxine, DHEA, human growth hormone, and a new memory-enhancing product that is four times more effective than Hydergine.

As a member of The Life Extension Foundation, you will learn the scientific basis for these life-enhancing therapies and how you may obtain them!

For just $75, you'll receive at least 60 newsletters a year telling you about the most exciting life extension breakthroughs in the world. You'll receive monthly issues of Life Extension Report, more frequent issues of Life Extension Update, and special Life Extension Hotline Bulletins when we have news that can't wait to be sent to you. In addition to all this priceless information, you'll also receive:

1. The Directory of Innovative Medical Doctors. A nationwide directory of doctors who are knowledgeable about these advanced therapies and may be willing to prescribe them for you.
2. The Physician's Guide To Life Extension Drugs. The first book ever published to provide American doctors with information about safe and effective "unapproved drugs."
3. The Directory Of Innovative Medical Clinics. If you were told you had an incurable disease would you believe your doctor? A disease your doctor says is "untreatable" may already have a cure that the FDA has not yet "approved" of. Scientists are effectively treating "terminal" victims of cancer, Alzheimer's Disease, etc. You can now find out where these advanced research centers are in The Directory Of Innovative Medical Clinics.
4. Discounts of 25% to 60% on your vitamin purchases. Members buy brand name nutrient supplements and advanced life extension formulas at super discount prices.
5. Free membership in The Life Extension Buyer's Club which provides access to therapies such as melatonin, acetyl-L carnitine, and generic permixon at below wholesale prices.

The Life Extension Foundation is the only organization in the world that tells you how to obtain the most advanced life extension therapies in the world...long before they are "approved" by the FDA. You will be the first to find out about products that will dramatically improve the quality of your life!

A look at government help, education, and more

Cliches and uninformed statements are easy to dismiss as senseless prescriptions from political outcasts and fringe ideologues. Libertarian advocates—be they candidates, state officers, speakers, pamphlet writers, or other spokespersons—may gain credibility for Libertarian ideas by presenting facts and quoting expert opinion that bolster LP positions. This column will provide the ammunition you can use to confound the skeptics and impress those searching for answers by citing mainstream publications and recognized opinion leaders (for and against individual liberty). Send in your submissions, with a clipping to verify the statement and the source, for inclusion in future issues of the NEWS.

Issue: Help for minority businesses

States and communities across the nation have set up programs to "set aside" a certain percentage of government contracts for minority companies (owned by females or members of selected ethnic backgrounds). These programs are touted as necessary for the formation and growth of the black and female business sectors. Not all minority observers agree:

"In fact, an argument can be made that set-asides actually are harmful to black commerce. Such programs have fostered minority dependency on government largess. They have been riddled with fraud. And, most important, they have failed to accomplish their primary goal, which is to increase the rate of black self-employment. Set-asides only interfere with this evolutionary process [to become a big firm]. As long as state and local governments reserve a certain portion of their contracts for minorities, the companies that depend on those contracts will never get to the point where they can make it in the mainstream economy. The mainstream is where the most successful black-owned companies are headed. Government set-aside programs lead in the opposite direction."

Joseph Perkins, columnist for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, Houston Post, June 17, 1994.

While set-asides tend to keep black businesses small and dependent, a federal program, Davis-Bacon, passed in 1931, neutralizes black labor competition by requiring "prevailing wages" be paid on all federal projects. Here's how Nona M. Brazier, an African-American co-owner of the Seattle-based Brazier Construction Co., describes it:

"Well-capitalized companies could afford union wages, but their unions usually kept blacks out. Black businesses—which were often less well capitalized—could not afford to pay those prohibitive rates on labor. . . . To seek Davis-Bacon contracts, minority firms must not only pay inflated wages and adopt inefficient work practices, but must expose themselves to huge compliance costs and threats of litigation and union harassment. Few minority-owned firms win Davis-Bacon contracts, and many others, like mine, give up trying. . . . Davis-Bacon remains a principal reason why blacks are unemployed at twice the rate of whites in the construction trade. Our nation as a whole also pays a steep price for Davis-Bacon, which accounts for 20 percent of the $232 billion construction business nationally. A Congressional Budget Office study found the act costs taxpayers $1 billion a year in unnecessary labor costs."

Nona M. Brazier, Wall Street Journal, Jan. 12, 1994.

Issue: Government and "being helpful"

The Clinton Administration's AmeriCorps is off and running at a cost of $1.5 billion during the next three years. This is a domestic Peace Corps, with 20,000 young volunteers, working in education, crime prevention, and other programs. John Walters, president of the New Citizenship Project, sees a problem with federalized charitable works:

"Overall, roughly 80 million Americans are active volunteers—that's almost one-third of the population. . . . AmeriCorps likely will do more to disrupt than supplement these efforts. A federal program that reimburses "volunteers" can only discourage people from offering their time for free. And local philanthropic and community organizations may divert resources from genuine needs as they become supplicants for the federal subsidy of an AmeriCorps volunteers. The irony at the heart of AmeriCorps is that it tries to replicate a successful private-sector activity—voluntary community service—with another government initiative modeled on failed social-welfare programs. The successes of existing community organizations could be expanded and duplicated if the harmful government intervention that already exists were reduced. Many private charitable efforts have been hobbled by federal regulations, judicial rulings that prevent them from offering low-cost social services, and professional-licensing, affirmative-action, and Occupational Safety and Health Administration requirements."

John Walters, "National Service Will Weaken Volunteerism," Insight, Oct. 10, 1994.

Even if one discounts the debilitating nature of government welfare programs, there is ample evidence that huge savings could be attained by reforming the delivery system. At one time, Milton Friedman advocated direct cash (negative income tax) subsidies to the poor in order to by-pass the waste that occurred in the bureaucracy. That waste is as prevalent as ever:

"America Works, a private company that finds jobs for people on welfare, recently opened an office in Indianapolis. Its biggest challenge? Getting welfare offices to send it enough potential clients. The company has jobs lined up and waiting for workers, but it has received an average of just 20 referrals a month from local caseworkers. Meanwhile, Indianapolis has 14,000 families on welfare. . . . The existing welfare delivery system is a well-meaning but misguided monopoly. Break it up, encourage new and innovative providers, pay for the right results, and more people. . . . will become producers of wealth instead of recipients of welfare."

Stephen Goldsmith, mayor of Indianapolis, "End the Welfare Delivery Monopoly," Wall Street Journal, Aug. 23, 1994.

Issue: Education

Every few years, a new educational "reform" sweeps through the government schools promising to reverse the decline into mediocrity and ignorance. The current buzzword is "outcomes-based education." Some parents object that OBE pushes standards and values to which their children should not be exposed. Others, however, see OBE as another abdication of the educators' responsibility to teach:

"Instead of clear, explicit goals, school districts are invited to produce long lists of vague generalities that their students are supposed to approximate. The whole idea of standards—even of grades—is anathema to the Great Thinkers out to reshape American education into an amorphous blob. Outcomes-based education may not be much of an improvement in educating the young—it may be a decided disimprovement—but the advantage for mediocre teachers and administrators is clear: they cannot be held clearly accountable if the standards themselves are muddy."

Paul Greenberg, a Pulitzer Prize winner and editor of the Little Rock, AR, Democrat-Gazette; column in the Houston Chronicle, Sept. 13, 1994.

A significant test is now under way that, if it fails, will revive the argument that only more tax money can improve the education of children in America. If it succeeds, then the face of government education will be changed forever:

"On Monday (10/3/94), Hartford, CT, became the first city in the country to turn over the management of all of its public schools to a private company. Clearly the Hartford Board of Education recognized that public education must move beyond the old nostrums—such as the notion that pouring more money into education will produce better-educated students. What's needed is a new ethic that forces schools to really perform, not just keep on making the same mistakes. . . . [A]s currently organized, schools are terribly inefficient: They continue to spend money in ways that do not consistently lead to high achievement. This lack of vision is seen in the perennial quest to lower pupil-teacher ratios. Between 1970 and 1990, American schools managed to reduce the average pupil-teacher ratio to 17.2 from 22.3. Yet extensive evidence has demonstrated that there is no relationship between class size and student performance. Similarly, while the percentage of teachers with master's degrees rose from less than a quarter to more than half between 1961 and 1986, and while schools regularly pay teachers with master's degrees higher salaries, there is no evidence that these degrees produce better teaching."

Eric A. Hanushek, professor of economics at the University of Rochester and chairman of the Panel on the Economics of Educational Reform, in Wall Street Journal, Oct. 5, 1994.

Editor's note: The Hartford Board of Education voted 6-3 to give Education Alternatives, Inc. a five-year contract to run the city's 32 schools, with 25,000 pupils and a $200 million annual budget. Minneapolis-based Education Alternatives already runs nine public schools in Baltimore and one in Miami. Education Alternatives promises to raise Hartford students' test scores without spending more money, plus invest $20 million over five years in capital improvements.

Issue: The future

The "Digital Revolution," according to its leaders and practitioners, will almost certainly guarantee a more libertarian future. According to Louis Rossetto, editor and publisher of Wired magazine, new networks and software will change the face of American society by the year 2025. Caution: Like other revolutions before it, this one can be captured and diverted—most likely through the information revolution's erosion of privacy—to serve the aims of the governing classes.

"Public education is dead; long live learning. . . . The era of central government is over. Signs of its imminent extinction are everywhere. The information economy, with daily transfers of trillions of dollars around the planet, has already stripped political leaders of control over their economies. . . . The development of online political activism exposes today's politicians for what they are: an increasingly out of touch, and obsolete, elite. . . . The quantity of violence will decrease since the power of governments—the main engines of slaughter in

With footage directly from satellite feeds, eyewitness accounts, and the testimony of forensic experts, these tapes prove...

The FBI & BATF got away with murder in Waco.

See how they did it, and learn -- in Attorney General Reno's own words -- why gun owners and libertarians are next.

This shocking, two video tape set -- "Waco, the Big Lie" -- provides compelling visual evidence of the murder of 96 innocent men, women and children in Waco, Texas. The FBI was so successful in managing the news, that few Americans even now -- a year later -- have any idea of what really happened.

These tapes are not merely disturbing, but utterly terrifying. They can help rouse your friends and neighbors out of their complacency, and help prevent you and your family from becoming the next victims.

"Waco, the Big Lie" was produced by Linda Thompson, director of the American Justice Federation, an eyewitness to the siege in Waco, and an attorney for three of the survivors.

IN THESE TAPES YOU WILL LEARN . . .

- ✓ Why the BATF dispatched an army of over 100 agents armed with machine guns, grenades, helicopters, and military tanks -- to serve a search warrant.
- ✓ Who fired first -- the Branch Davidians or the BATF?
- ✓ Why three BATF agents were apparently deliberately shot and killed by other agents during the raid.
- ✓ Why the FBI and BATF threatened reporters in Waco with “tragic consequences” if they tried to get within two miles of the compound.
- ✓ The FBI’s justification for shooting one unarmed Davidian in the back when he tried to climb a fence to enter the compound. He was left hanging on the fence for three days, and allowed to be eaten by wild dogs.

- ✓ The likely effect of CS gas on children in the compound.
A treaty signed by the U.S. months before Waco, banned CS gas as "too inhumane" to be used in war. Yet the FBI fired hundreds of rounds into the compound even though they knew the children had no gas masks.
- ✓ Why all exists from the Davidians' home were deliberately destroyed by FBI tanks.
- ✓ See for yourself how the fire that destroyed the compound really started.
- ✓ Why the FBI bulldozed the remains of the compound and destroyed virtually all physical evidence before arson investigators were allowed on the property.
- ✓ Attorney General Janet Reno's own words announcing that the government is planning many such raids soon against gun owners, independent Christians, "cults," and other "threats."

You will probably never see these video tapes on TV. The networks told producer Linda Thompson they would not show them. Reporters at a few independent stations that agreed to air the tapes were told they would be fired before they would be allowed to show them.

It may soon be illegal for you to buy a copy of "Waco, the Big Lie." When Janet Reno demanded government censorship of violence on TV, she explicitly mentioned coverage of Waco.

Order your copy of "Waco, the Big Lie" now -- just $40, postage included, for both video tapes (VHS format). VISA and Mastercard accepted.

DEATH & TAXES

Jeffrey F. Jackson's shocking film exposé tells the story of Gordon Kahl, a North Dakota farmer who became America's "most-wanted" fugitive.

How did a WWII hero become the target of one of the largest manhunts in FBI history? Was Kahl a gun-toting fanatic or a victim of the IRS? Did Bill Clinton conspire to cover-up his torture and execution? Was the badly burned and mutilated body found in Arkansas, in fact, Gordon Kahl?

DEATH & TAXES explores the myths and controversies surrounding a man who dared to challenge the IRS. The movie follows the documentary trail of Kahl as his body is exhumed for a new autopsy. Building on newsreel clips, interviews and eye witness accounts of the two fiery shoot-outs between Kahl and federal agents, DEATH & TAXES reveals for the first time the true story as it happened and as it continues to reverberate nationally.

"... Jackson sticks it to the IRS and the Feds in 'Death & Taxes', a hard-hitting reinvestigation..."
Derek Elly, Variety

"...a devastating and disturbing picture of America..."
Sheila Whitaker, London Film Festival

"DEATH & TAXES is the true story of what the government did to Gordon and our family..."

Ideal third party

We were thumbing through the major newspaper in our area, the San Jose Mercury News, and were intrigued by an article entitled, "Is it time to break two-party tradition?" The basic premise of the article is that the general public is fed up with how the Democrats and Republicans have been running the country, and that they desire a viable third party. The article went on to describe the ideal third party:

"... The Democratic and Republican Parties could be peeled off into a new 'centrist' party that is somewhat conservative on economic issues and moderate to liberal on social matters.

"In (Gordon) Black's [a veteran pollster] view, this party would be for term limits and a balanced budget amendment. . ."

As we read this article we noticed a glaring omission, the strongest third party in all the United States, the Libertarian Party. In that way the article was discouraging. It shows how the mainstream media can disregard the Libertarians even when on the topic of third parties. Another incident in what seems to be a national media conspiracy to not mention the Libertarian Party under any circumstances.

In another way, however, it was encouraging. It was another indication that what we call the "force" is alive in America. The force is the general discontent with the Demopublicans and Republicrats growing continually. The same force that allowed Ross Perot to get 19 percent of the vote for president can be tapped by the Libertarian Party.

Lots of laws

Insanity reigns! There are umpteen thousands of laws already on the books. But the bureaucrats and federal and state legislators create so many new laws that it is not possible for a person to even read them. Sometimes the legislators don't even read them (they exempt themselves and keep passing more laws). So there is no way a person can be a "law-abiding" citizen. You can't know all the laws. At any given time, you are probably breaking some law.

Thus we are all criminals to a degree. It only remains for us to keep a low profile and hope we never draw the policeman's and lawyer's attention. They can "get" anyone if they want to do it. So we are locked into a game we cannot win. The best we can do is to not lose too badly. This is insanity.

Who dares to speak up and draw attention to themselves? This is control by confusion, overwhelm, and coercion. We can't be a free people when we live in constant anxiety. It must be stopped.

Moses governed a whole nation with 10 laws. Everyone could know and understand the law. Maybe we could learn from Moses.

Moriarty

Although I regret that anyone has to feel the force of General Reno's firebrand-

Staying in touch

Letters to the editor

type inquisitions, I'm delighted that Michael Moriarty has had his wake-up call. His talent and renown should be a real asset to us.

However, I am somewhat distressed by his wish to become the commanding general the day he wakes up on our side of the line. After all, there are a lot of well known and articulate people who have been slogging in the Libertarian trenches for years.

I suggest he spend some time fund raising for other candidates, run for governor of New York or California, work on converting some of his liberal pals (that should give him some idea what he will be up against as a candidate), or otherwise involve himself in Libertarian activities.

Then, after he has shown that he really is committed to Libertarian ideals, I would support him wholeheartedly.

William H. McGlamery
Morristown, TN

Editor's note: Michael Moriarty stated (Oct. 1994 NEWS) he would be seeking the presidency in 1996 as an independent, not Libertarian.

Discrimination

[When] I received my October NEWS, one column affected me, and I am writing to make my feeling known. The column was "Talking points," and the issue was "employment discrimination." It mentions the Americans with Disabilities Act that I may be able to use to insure that I am not subject to discrimination.

The column does not clearly say whether the Libertarian Party is for or against this act, but the act does not seem to support Libertarian values. However, Libertarians would be very unlikely to discriminate.

My circumstance is that I suffered a severe head injury a couple of years ago. It put me in a coma for a month, and I spent another six months in the hospital. I do not think that I am mentally disabled and all my friends seem to think that I'm recovered to my former self. However, where I work, the people I work for (who never were my friends before) seem to be using the fact that I have a head injury as a reason to discriminate against me. Of course, they may not have liked me before, but they had no excuse to treat me in ways that I see as discrimination.

While we would like to end government involvement in many aspects of our lives, there are circumstances that make it so we need some protection.

I just wanted to make my viewpoint known to the Libertarian Party.

Duane Grindstaff

Wilson

As a volunteer working for the Guy Wilson congressional campaign, I was quite pleased to see him featured in your lead story in the October issue. My regional coordinator Dennis Decherd and Laura McFadden of the Long Beach area are cooperating and working hard, and we are especially fortunate to have an elected city council member, Art Olivier, on our steering committee.

Since my reason for belonging to the party is to elect Libertarians to office, opportunities like this make the efforts worthwhile, while programs like Project Healthy Choice and Operation Safe Streets give the 20 percent of American voters who identify themselves as libertarians a real incentive to vote their convictions.

The end of the Cold War is resulting in global socio-political and economic changes of obvious significance. Let's be a part of it!

Budget woes

The budget is writ with red ink;
To change it to black it must shrink.
It's too large to budge it
And so I would judge it

Slavery

One advantage in being over 80 years old is that it makes available some useful and forgotten information. I majored in pre-Keynesian economics, graduated in 1933, was six days too young to vote in 1932 against Roosevelt who obviously was promising an impossible everything to everyone.

He was driven by a lust to play God with others' billions, taken from the prudent and productive in the final analysis at gunpoint. He proposed universal slavery, better known as Socialist Security, that is slowly but inevitably bankrupting the economy. The Supreme Court had two shots at the issue, rejected it the first time around. Then Franklin was able to place two new members in the court who in 1933 turned the vote 6-5 to make this once free nation into a slave state. Mandatory is slavery.

The court then has inherited that determination, not having rejected it since then. Future decisions for or against freedom are minor against the pattern that Clinton is seeking to copy. He wants to play cheap messiah by first enslaving everyone so he can give a lesser bounty to everyone, but not working to get the funds from voluntary sources, which is what Christ requires.

These are not the first cases of enslavement by law. The Constitution lets us keep what is ours—life, liberty, and property—but entitlements since then allow robbing others for such things as a subsidized education and equal rights lawsuits.

There have been other enslavements, of course. The draft is one. Income tax is another. Liberty is no longer available, thanks to Congress and the courts. And those who imposed such laws broke several Commandments, as against coveting, stealing (morally illegal), lying that it's good for us, and worshipping Mammon. Man-made government is evil, but legal and ethical. And, in my opinion, the Supreme Court helps keep it that way.

ISIL convention

"Galt's Gulch for a week." "A battery recharger for the soul." Imagine a gathering of libertarians from around the world. Add in all the great things you expect at a libertarian convention—interesting speakers, stimulating discussions, friendship, and camaraderie. Then subtract out those mundane and perhaps necessary evils you may have come to expect: belligerent bylaws battles, protracted platform proceedings, and euphonious electoral effluent. What remains is a convention unlike any other—a libertarian convention for the soul.

From Oct. 2-7, 1994, about 100 citizens of the world met in Merida, a quaint and charming city in the heart of the Yucatan peninsula of Mexico, for the 13th annual convention of the International Society for Individual Liberty. We learned about the progress of sovereignty movements in Argentina, Canada, Hawaii, New Zealand, Somalia, South Africa, and many of the European countries. We also learned about threats to human liberty; particularly disturbing was Jarret Wollstein's description of the black unmarked helicopters on U.S. soil (courtesy of the U.S. government in the name of freedom).

John Hospers told of the nightmare which is rent control in New York City, and of tragedies of the drug war. He eloquently warned us that it is twilight and we should be aware. Leon Louw explained how humans by their nature want to believe the worst, and that in selling libertarianism we should not try to fight this tendency or correct it, but rather use it to our advantage. Michael van Notten informed us that in Somalia people refer to the U.N. as "The Thing."

We heard Patrick Henry (Bruce Evoy) roar "Give me liberty, or give me death!" We saw poetry performed with spirit and fire. We learned about financial privacy, free market environmentalism, and FIJA. We dined, whispered, smiled, and laughed, and some of us even danced.

I did not set out to chronicle this convention, and this brief account is unforgivably incomplete. Let me conclude by mentioning that you can take part in next year's ISIL convention which will take place in Athens, in the enchanted land of Greece, set on the sparkling Aegean Sea, on Oct. 15-20, 1995. The price, guaranteed through March 31, 1995, is $500. Contact Mary Margaret Glennie, 1317 Lakewood Drive, Fort Collins, CO 80521; or call 303-484-8184, or fax 303-224-1933.

Over a third of this year's attendees paid a deposit for next year's convention as soon as it was offered. I'll be there. Will you?

A call to pens (and phones, faxes, etc.)

By DIEDRE DENNIS

Washington has ousted Tom Foley; Massachusetts has no more rent control; and Oregonians can die with dignity. What an election! And, as if that weren't enough for one month. . .

The President has signed the Dietary Supplement Act! It's law now. This is the bill that prevents the FDA from regulating vitamin supplements out of existence. We have been working on its passage since October 1993. Congratulations!

We have a lot to look forward to with this new Congress. The congressional reform and spending cut proposals that we've watched languish in committee may now become law. We also can expect plenty of new proposals like Chris Cox's committee restructuring. He'd like to see obsolete committees, remnants of the liberal welfare state, abolished and replaced by useful committees like the Committee on Law Revision and Repeal. Ah! What bliss!

I don't mean to suggest that leviathan government has been conquered; that's hardly the case. But many of those who sponsored the best (and most stifled) legislation in the last Congress can now bring their bills out of committee and onto the floor. Once those bills reach a vote, the many new members, who are most often our strongest allies, will work for passage.

Passage of House Resolution 140, which requires the federal government to include funding with its mandates, was a long shot a month ago but today it is a strong possibility.

Federal term limits are likely to see action soon, too. The new Congress, mindful of the many state term limits victories, is likely to be favorably disposed to HR 3835, the National Voice on Term Limits Act that creates a non-binding national referendum on the subject.

Now is the time to remind your legislators why they were elected and encourage them to keep their promises for smaller, less intrusive government. This is sure to be an interesting two years for government; be involved.

Initiative action

Along with voting for individual candidates, many Americans also spoke out on Nov. 8 on a variety of ballot initiatives.

Term limits continued to be a popular idea, with approval in Alaska, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, and Nevada—bringing to 21 the number of states that have accepted the idea. Utah voters rejected term limits this time.

Oregon voters passed a "Death with Dignity" proposal, which allows physicians to prescribe lethal medicine to dying patients.

Anti-gay initiatives in Idaho and Oregon were defeated, indicating the voters had a libertarian-leaning attitude rather than the conservative one many political pundits touted.

In Alaska, Measure 2 was passed adding victims' rights to the state constitution. "It's like it was lifted from part 1 of Operation Safe Streets," said Alaska LP Chair Len Karpinski. "We could not have drafted it better."

Also in Alaska, Measure 1 passed with 72 percent of the vote. It changed the state constitution's wording by adding the phrase "the individual right to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed by the state or a subdivision of the state," to the present section that "is a clone of the federal constitution's right to keep and bear sporting goods," said Karpinski. The additional phrase was added "just in case 20th century people aren't sure what the founders meant by militia," he said.

NOW HIRING AT LIBERTARIAN PARTY NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS

Are You Politically Ambidextrous?

The National Libertarian Party headquarters is planning to add an important staff position to the team in Washington, DC: a combination Ballot Access Coordinator/Projects Manager.

This challenging new full-time job will require a politically savvy applicant with excellent communications skills, strong attention to detail, good interpersonal skills, and the ability to successfully steer diverse projects to completion. Applicants should be able to demonstrate a commitment to Libertarian political action and a track record of political and/or professional success.

This job will require an interesting assortment of skills, so we're looking for someone who is "politically ambidextrous"—able to juggle many different assignments and tasks. Responsibilities include:

Projects Manager:

- Successfully plan, manage, and complete miscellaneous (and variable) office and political tasks.
- Answer mail and return phone calls for the National Director and the Communications Director.
- Independently solve membership and affiliate service problems.

Ballot Access Coordinator:

- Work with party experts to plan, coordinate, and implement nationwide ballot access strategy.
- Place ads for petitioners; screen and hire qualified petitioners.
- Negotiate and sign contracts with petitioners. Arrange and track payments to petitioners and troubleshoot problems.
- Maintain ongoing communication with petitioners, state chairs, and volunteer coordinators of various petition drives.
- Know state laws regulating the funding of petitioners; ensure that we are in compliance with all regulations.

Interested in playing a major role in the Libertarian movement? This is your chance to be a vital part of the team in "Action Central" in Washington, DC! Qualified candidates for this position will need to come to Washington, DC for an interview.

this century—is waning.”

Louis Rossetto, “Oh, what techno wonders,” USA Today, Sept. 15, 1994.

Issue: Crime and drug prohibition

Conservative intellectual William F. Buckley Jr. continues to use his nationally syndicated column to push for legalization of drugs. Lately, he cited a new report issued by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York titled, “A Wiser Course:

Ending Drug Prohibition.”

“As a practical matter, the committee advocates the repeal of all federal legislation dealing with drugs, leaving it to the states to write their own policies. . . The lawyers describe the impact of the drug laws on the judicial system. In some states it has become all but impossible to schedule a civil action, so clogged are the courts with drug-related cases. Twice as many Americans are in prison today as 10 years ago. The drug war has become a war against drug users, and the result is a serious and comprehensive contraction of civil liberties. . . Is it obvious that if drugs were legalized, the rate of drug consumption would dramatically rise? No—only 2 percent of Americans say they don’t use drugs because they are illegal. . . Aren’t we rightly concerned over the violence that would result from legalization? . . . What there is a great deal of is violent and anti-social behavior by men and women who in order to sustain their illegal habits are engaged every day in theft, mayhem, prostitution, and the communication of sexually transmitted diseases, including to children.”

Buckley’s column in Houston Chronicle, Oct. 3, 1994.

The election is over, but . . . the war of ideas rages on.

And Liberty provides the intellectual ammunition to help you in that struggle.

The votes are counted. The Republicans have seized Congress. Bill Clinton has been slapped in the face by the body politic. So now what? Are Americans really turning to the philosophy of limited government? Can the Republican Party deliver what our country needs? Is its much-ballyhooed “Contract with America” really a contract on America?

For answers to these and other questions, read Liberty, the liveliest, most provocative, most fun journal of ideas in the libertarian — or any other — movement.

Liberty challenges, informs, provokes, and delights libertarians on six continents. In a world of sacred cows and ideologically protected citadels, Liberty appraises the many currents of freedom and reaction, no strongholds barred.

Where Taxes Are Lowest

In a special report, Liberty details personal tax levels in every state, listing actual taxes at four different income levels. Just by moving to another part of the country, you could cut your tax burden by as much as 75%.

To receive the new, updated edition of this popular monograph, use the coupon at the right or, when you call us, just say you want the “Libertarian Party special offer.”

Money Back Double Guarantee

1. We guarantee a full refund with no questions upon your request after you have received your first issue.
 2. At any time during your subscription, we will guarantee a full pro-rated refund for any unmailed issues.
- In any event, your free bonus and first issue are yours to keep with our compliments.
