Gallegos Finds Controversy on RTD Board

by Ron Bain, Liberty Editor Emeritus

Dan Gallegos was elected to the Regional Transportation District Board of Directors without any coverage of his candidacy from the Denver media—or did any reporters become interested in Gallegos’ positions on transportation issues until after he had been sworn in as an RTD board member.

"Once I was in office, a local [Conifer] paper wanted to come interview me," the elected Libertarian said. "After they printed that interview, then the letters to the editor started coming in."

Media reports have characterized Gallegos and several other RTD board members elected in November 1994 as "stealth candidates," and have accused the entire board of violating the Sunshine Laws, which require governmental entities to hold all discussions and make all decisions about the expenditure of public funds in a publicly scheduled meeting.

"We have not violated the Sunshine Laws," Gallegos stated firmly. The press vilified former RTD Board Chairman Brian Propp, he noted, not for missing meetings, but for being out of town when the RTD board was not meeting.

Furthermore, the press gave much play and credence to complaints about alleged RTD violations of the Sunshine Laws from Boulder Mayor Leslie Durgin and Denver Mayor Wellington Webb. Yet it is obvious from public records that the Boulder City Council and the Denver City Council routinely discuss issues and make decisions outside of convened public meetings. Gallegos agreed that the press coverage of the Propp/RTD controversy had an obvious agenda other than the truth, legal operations of government bodies, and keeping the public fully informed.

Now that Propp has resigned and the "Sandinista Effect" is abating, RTD is functioning a little less in the public spotlight, which has allowed Gallegos to focus on the issues.

"It goes away—it calms down," he said. "If you pick your fights, it's just not that hard to handle."

Come to the LPC Picnic!

by Chris Bogart

The Libertarian Party of Colorado is sponsoring an Independence Day picnic in Boulder's Eben G. Fine Park on Sunday, July 2, 1995, at 2:00 p.m.

We want to celebrate the party's recent progress with all the people who have spent time and energy building it over the years. If you are or were an activist associated with the LP, please come and bring your friends and family.

We'll provide plates, forks, charcoal grills, napkins, etc.—bring your own food and drinks. Sharing or bartering of food will not be regulated, taxed, or prohibited by the state party. You also might want to bring sports equipment—volleyballs, frisbees, whatever.

Any questions? Call Chris Bogart at (303) 449-6327 or Todd Wasserman at (303) 369-6369.
From the Chair:

Now that the Colorado General Assembly has finished its work, we can heave a sigh of relief—as the old saying goes, "No man's life, liberty, or property is safe while the legislature is in session." Of particular interest to citizens is that select group of legislators who almost never met a bill they didn't like.

In the House, five legislators cast third-reading (final) NO votes less than 5 percent of the time: Bill Kaufman (R-Loveland), Steve Tool (R-Fort Collins), Debbie Allen (R-Aurora), Marcy Morrison (R-Manitou Springs), and Russell George (R-Rifle). The average House member voted NO 11.2 percent of the time.

In the Senate, six legislators cast third-reading NO votes less than 2 percent of the time: James Rizzuto (D-La Junta), Al McKiejohn (R-Arvada), Elsie Lacy (R-Aurora), Joan Johnson (D-Denver), Dottie Wham (R-Denver), and Don Ament (R-IIliff). The average Senator voted NO 8.6 percent of the time.

We wonder if these folks have any political philosophy at all; or maybe they're working on the theory that "if it got out of committee, it must he good." The constituents of these legislators ought to take a closer look at what's being done in their name.

The legislators casting the highest percentage of NO votes in the House were Eric Prinzler (R-Denver), Phil Pankey (R-Denver), Bill Jerke (R-Lasalle), Penn Pfiffner (R-Lakewood), and Mark Paschall (R-Arvada).

The legislators casting the highest percentage of NO votes in the Senate were Charles Duke (R-Monument), Dorothy Rupert (D-Boulder), Bill Thiebaut (D-Pueblo), and Paul Weissmann (D-Louisville).

David Aitken

From the Editor:

Wow, is there a lot going on! New affiliates are getting organized, ballot access has been eased, membership is climbing rapidly, and now we've finally got the voter registration list.

The membership growth Larry cites on page 5 is especially heartening when you consider that the LP traditionally loses members during the off-election years. And Presidential election years are when we really grow. So just wait 'til next year!

Wait 'til next month, too! We've got some good stuff we just couldn't squeeze in this issue, like Scott Williams' great letter, a neat cartoon, and the Great Lost Platform Planks. Stay tuned!

Gallegos has not yet introduced any resolutions, but voted in favor of continuing the purchase of light rail cars that was approved by the previous board in December. Following that vote, Gallegos began getting flak from Libertarians, just as the media barrage was beginning to subside.

“If it comes right down to it, we can sell ‘em and get our money back,” Gallegos stated. Even though he wants Denver’s light rail program “dead,” Gallegos said his biggest problem with government-provided train and bus service in the metropolitan area is that ridership is subsidized.

“I wouldn’t mind if the riders paid for it,” Gallegos explained. “I don’t even mind the government providing the service, because we’ve already got the government and we’ve already got the service. But the users should pay for it.”

Regional bus routes are the most efficient part of RTD’s operations, recovering 40 percent of operating costs from rider fares. But regular city buses recover only 15 percent. The district sales tax accounts for about 67 percent of RTD’s operating costs, with federal grants making up the bulk of the remainder.

“To those Libertarians who have criticized me, thanks—but now it’s time for you to run.”

Bureaucrats and editors upset with the new make-up of the RTD board have suggested that in the future, the board should be appointed and not elected. Gallegos called that idea taxation without representation. Service would improve, he said, if RTD was accountable to its ridership for its funding.

“Riders are a beneficiary of government intervention in my life and my family’s lives,” Gallegos asserted. “When my son goes to buy a pop, he’s subsidizing someone who parks their Lencat at a Park-N-Ride and rides all day for a dollar. The riders should be paying for that service, not me, not my child.”

The TABOR Amendment will require RTD to make rebates to the district’s citizens if funding limits are exceeded, and that’s just what Gallegos wants to do. “Let’s find enough revenue to reduce the tax and rebate some funds under TABOR,” he enthused. “I hope to find the most equitable way to rebate the money back to the taxpayers, and even reduce the tax.”

Die-hard Libertarians may not be happy with all of Gallegos’ positions on transportation issues (or with the fact that he works for the U.S. Postal Service), but he notes that few Libertarians have risked the glare of the public spotlight.

“To those Libertarians who have criticized me, thanks—but now it’s time for you to run.”

Gallegos was reared in a Democratic family in Denver. He joined the Marines and was stationed in Indiana in 1982, when he met Beth, the lady he eventually married in 1985. They moved back to the Denver metropolitan area, had a son, Danny III, and now reside in the Conifer area.

During the Reagan era, Gallegos said, he could be described as a “police-state fascist,” but he began listening to Rick Barber and heard things he liked about the libertarian philosophy.

“I’d always been a firearms advocate. I used pot five times in high school. Some of the things Rick was saying started making sense to me. As long as you’re not doing anything to me personally, it’s none of my business.”

Coming from ancestry that includes Indian and European Spanish, Gallegos is an elected Libertarian with an opinion on affirmative action. “I’m against it,” he said. “This’ll explain why: my dad recently purchased a counter top for his kitchen. We went to the manufacturer here in Denver, and the owner was Hispanic, and most of the employees were Hispanic or black. Now that guy’s gonna have to fire minorities in order to hire Caucasians.”

Gallegos’ father was stern, but not abusive. “The belt was for little boys,” Gallegos recalled. “One day he hit me with his hand. I knew that was for adults, and I became an adult that day.” Government should not interfere with corporal punishment or split up families, he said. “Men don’t have any say until the child is born, then they’re financially obligated for 18 years.”

On other family issues, Gallegos said he doesn’t favor abortion personally, but doesn’t approve of the government legislating reproductive rights.

Social Security? “Let’s stick to that deal. Let’s respect that contract. Let’s just not give any more people that deal.”

The Post Office? “I don’t plan on retiring from the federal government. I have investments. If there wasn’t so much government intervention, I would probably be able to start my own business. Government has pretty much regulated everybody out of business.”

State & national memberships at all-time highs

LP Membership Growth Accelerating

by Larry Hoffenberg

I'm the LPC's new Membership Director, and this is the first in a series of updates to you, the members. In future updates, I'll be reporting on our progress in dramatically increasing the size and clout of the LP in Colorado. But for now, allow me to preach to the choir for a few paragraphs.

All of us on the Board of Directors are committed to growing the LP into an effective political organization that wins elections—elections for State House and US Congress, not just for RTD or school board. It will happen, it's just a question of when.

It's also a question of how long we can afford to wait, literally. Every day, the Feds continue to expand their stranglehold on our money. They spend $1,000,000 of our money every five seconds! They continue to debase the dollar with government-induced inflation. They continue to take from us more than we spend on food, clothing, shelter, and transportation, combined. And they will continue to continue, for as long as we let them.

At some point in the future, and no one can predict just when, the electorate will take a line from that great American hero, Popeye, and say "That's all I can stand and I can stand no more." I'm confident that when the time is right, we'll be inundated with new members and will start winning major elections.

As in the fall of the Berlin Wall and the stock market crash of 1987, only a handful of the self-anointed experts will be expecting it. It will just happen. After the fact, of course, the pundits will quickly and cleverly rationalize every aspect of what just happened.

Americans are clamoring for more choice at the ballot box. Last November's Republican landslide still has the Democrats running for cover. President Clinton's approval ratings are dreadful. (Only Newt Gingrich's are lower.) There is talk of a Democratic primary challenge. There are any number of potential independent candidates for president: Ross Perot, Colin Powell, Pat Buchanan, and Jesse Jackson to name a few. There are unprecedented levels of dissatisfaction and apathy among the voters.

Unprecedented uncertainty breeds unprecedented opportunity. Shortly after the November elections, Speaker Newt, leader of the so-called Republican Revolution, speculated: "If (all) this just degenerates after the historic election...the American people, I believe, will move to a third party in a massive way."

Attention, Speaker Newt: the Libertarian Party has been America's third largest party for at least the past ten years. We're still waiting in the wings, but I believe that our time will soon be at hand. Again, there probably won't be a specific trigger, it'll be like that chaotic flutter of a lone butterfly's wings in the Amazon jungle that results in a hurricane over Miami.

Well, American voters are starting to flap their political wings. Here's what's happening:

⇒ Total dues-paying membership in the national Libertarian Party reached 12,500 as of May 5th, an all-time high. That's a 52% annualized growth rate since January 1, 1995. We're well on our way toward reaching the Project Times Two goal of 20,000.

⇒ In Colorado, we just surpassed 400 dues-paying national members, an all-time high. That puts Colorado in ninth place in the state membership rankings and in second place in terms of members per overall population.

⇒ National membership in Colorado grew more than 16% in the first four months of 1995, compared to just over 12% for all of 1994!

⇒ Our 1,859 registered Libertarian voters in Colorado (as of April 12th) put us at just under one-tenth of one percent (0.1%) of voters, a very tiny number, but nevertheless an all-time high.

Keep an eye on your mailbox over the next few months. We'll be bringing you news about our efforts to reach every registered Libertarian in the state and ask them to become dues-paying members in the Party. We're also going to reach a good portion of the unaffiliated voters in this state. A Gallup poll released earlier this year reported that 22% of Americans consider themselves libertarian. We're going out to find them!

You can help us in our efforts, by promptly renewing your membership. Please check the mailing label on the front of this newsletter. If your membership has already expired or will expire soon, please fill out the form on page 2 and send us your check today. And thanks for your continuing support of the LP.
LPC Gets List of Registered Voters!

By the time you read this, the LPC will have a complete list of Colorado’s registered voters (as of April) on CD-ROM. Getting this list has been a party goal for some time now, and was the focus of an intense fund-raising effort by Fund-raising Director Bette Rose Smith. The campaign raised about $1500, with which the party intended to buy the list on computer tape (for $1200) from the Secretary of State’s office.

The two major parties get the list regularly for free, and some people wanted the LPC to wage a legal battle for the same treatment. Such a suit would cost at least $5000, however, with no guarantee of success, so that option was not feasible.

Smith herself found a third, even better, alternative: a private company that would sell us the latest list available for $150. Not only that, but they put it on CD-ROM, far easier for us to deal with than ten reels of 9-track tape!

The savings mean we can afford to mail to all the registered Libertarians right away (which may not have been possible otherwise), extend Colorado Liberty subscriptions to them, and perhaps even begin targeted test mailings to unaffiliated voters.

Way to go, Bette Rose!

Ballot Access Reform Passes

HB1022, the ballot access bill, finally passed in the waning moments of the legislative session, and may have been signed by the Governor by the time you read this.

The conference committee version described here last month was rejected by the Senate and sent back to another conference committee to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions. The second conference committee settled on a 2 percent signature requirement for all races except president, with caps as follows:

- All statewide - 1000
- Congress, State Board of Education, Board of Regents - 800
- State Senate - 600
- State House - 400
- District Attorney - 650
- County offices - 750

The bill also contains a $500 filing fee for President and a one week cure period. Attorney General Gale Norton helped by calling Senate Majority Leader Jeff Wells and pointing out that the bill was necessary to resolve outstanding legal issues.

Activists Wanted to Attend Campaign Workshop

Campaigns Director Doug Anderson is still looking for people who want to attend campaign consultant Sal Guzzetta’s three-day political campaign seminar. Time is growing short. The seminar takes place in Denver Friday, July 7 through Sunday, July 9. Financial assistance from the LPC may be available for qualified applicants.

Volunteers Wanted

Because of Dan Gallegos’ and Dave Bishop’s presence on the Regional Transportation District board, we need someone to attend the board meetings on a regular basis and write a short article (300 words max) about what they did and how they voted. If you can help, call the LPC office or contact Doug Anderson directly at (303) 698-2651.

Liberarians Host Charity Fund-raiser

“Washington-based Gays & Lesbians for Individual Liberty (GLIL) held an ACADEMY AWARDS CELEBRATION FOR YOUTH that raised some $7,000 for a private, nonprofit youth services agency. GLIL President David Morris said ‘Too often, libertarians talk about letting charities meet the needs in society, but then they don’t support the charities they talk about. We just decided to put our money where our mouths were.’ The event was a huge success and generated a great deal of positive publicity for the group.” — source: Unconventional Wisdom, a quarterly newsletter edited by Gene Cisewski.

Miscellaneous Political Stuff

Joining Harry Browne and Irwin Schiff in the quest for the LP presidential nomination are Doug Ohmen (California), Rick Tompkins (Arizona), and Dick Boddie (California).

State Representative Penn Pfiffner, who was chair of the Colorado LP in the early 80’s, has been appointed to the Sunrise/Sunset committee, where he and other legislators will decide if various and sundry groups will be regulated.

Kudos to...

David Segal, who continues to make his presence felt in the local media. Shortly after the Right to Bear Arms Rally, KOA’s Mike Rosen began lambasting Segal on the air for daring to compare the Oklahoma City bombers with the brave federal employees who acted to restore law ’n order at Ruby Ridge and Mt. Carmel. Segal called in and spent the better part of an hour debating with Rosen, doing a commendable job in a very difficult situation.

Bette Rose Smith for hiring a professional answering service to handle calls to the LPC office. She is contributing the cost for the first six months. This service provides a much more professional image than our old machine, plus they will contact someone immediately when necessary. No more calls from the media that don’t get answered for days!

Brian Dawson, who has done political research for Campaigns Director Doug Anderson.

Doug Bruce and David Aitken, who had outstanding letters in the Denver Post on the same day. Bruce took Chuck Green to task for his “editorial whimper” about how his freedom to walk the dog isn’t threatened. Aitken declared George Bush a Tory and demanded an accounting for Waco and Ruby Ridge.
