Caryn Ann,

In a world marked by increasing global tensions and ever-growing conflict, the Libertarian Party stands firm as a unique and principled voice in American politics. As Republicans and Democrats continue to resort to military force and proxy-war funding in an attempt to police the world's bad actors, it is crucial to remember the costs of war, from the immeasurable loss of human life to the profound economic, social, and geopolitical ramifications.

The most tragic and irreparable consequence of war is the loss of human life.

At home, mothers, fathers, sons, and daughters are endlessly and needlessly sent overseas to risk their lives on commands given by elected officials covering in Washington. These brave men and women who selflessly serve in the armed forces, along with their families, endure enormous sacrifices.

Lengthy deployments, ever-present danger, and the emotional hell of separation and uncertainty take a heavy toll on military families. From the burdens of being a single parent to the stream of lonely tears each night as those left behind cry themselves to sleep, their hardships often go unnoticed.

And their reward is all too often a folded flag.

Abroad, innocent men, women and children are cornered in their communities as American-sponsored warfare rages like an inferno around them threatening their very existence, oftentimes claiming the lives of these civilian bystanders. It is in these moments, when powerful nations like the United States assert themselves as the world's policemen and intervene in conflicts far from home, that shattered communities and a legacy of resentment are born. This resentment breeds a new generation of foreign fighters, willing to take up arms against American aggression. The U.S. involvement in conflicts like the Middle East has, at times, created the very threats it aimed to eliminate.

Furthermore, war undeniably comes at a staggering economic cost. The financial burden on taxpayers of maintaining a global military presence and funding protracted wars abroad is staggering. The United States has spent trillions of dollars on conflicts over the past two decades, siphoning resources away from programs the two old parties claim to care about: education, healthcare, infrastructure, and more. This financial strain directly affects the well-being of American citizens, further exacerbating inequality and hampering economic growth.

American taxpayers shoulder the immense financial burden of war. With every missile launched and troop deployment, the public pays a steep price. The true monetary cost of war is not only in the trillions spent directly on military operations but also in the long-term costs of caring for veterans, repairing infrastructure, and addressing the far-reaching societal consequences.

It's never been more clear: Democrats and Republicans care more about tearing down foreign countries than they do about lifting their up their own.

Amidst the disturbing trends of militarism and interventionism perpetuated by the Republican and Democratic parties, the Libertarian Party stands as the only true anti-war option. In a landscape marked by partisan politics and ideological divides, the Libertarian Party's commitment to peace and non-interventionism represents a beacon of hope for those who yearn for a world where diplomacy takes precedence over the destructive cycle of war.

Caryn Ann, we know you're with us, so will you help us spread this message?

An anti-war campaign is underway at the Libertarian Party. Across the country, locations have been carefully selected right in the communities our congresspeople call home. With your help a special message to these warmongers will be displayed on billboards across the country, alerting their constituents to the damage caused by the votes they've cast. Lets send a message to the politicians threatening our existence. Let's tell them it's time to stop policing the world.

How far this message spreads is in your hands.

Each donation brings us closer to another billboard in another warmonger's back yard. Just $100 today buys a month of visibility in a single location. Lets cover America in black and gold and show the strength of our peaceful opposition.

Incessant warfare always leads to the senseless deaths of individuals who have dreams, aspirations, and loved ones, leaving a lasting void in their communities. It takes a heavy toll on the collective conscience, both at home and abroad, as we reckon with the costs of our actions. Libertarians will continue to advocate for non-intervention, emphasizing diplomacy over aggression. We will continue to promote a vision of America that doesn't seek to dominate the world but rather to lead by example and foster peaceful relations through trade, cooperation, and diplomacy.

And we're glad you're on our side.
