A Three-Way Race!

RANDOLPH CAN WIN!

Randolph tells it like it is.

We Alaskans, living here and now, will decide what Alaska's future will be. We cannot escape that fact or that responsibility. Fortunately, we still have the political freedom to choose that future. But every day that government grows more wealthy and powerful, that freedom is in jeopardy.

Alaska, with its fantastic array of resources and relatively small population is a unique place at a unique time. Alaska needs a governor who reflects that uniqueness.

Some people ask whether Dick Randolph can win the governor's race, and what I will do when I am elected. I believe it is not only possible, but probable that I will be elected on November 2.

As governor, my policies will all be designed to accentuate the worth and freedom of the individual and decrease the power of government. The key to unleashing the greatness of individual Alaskans who inhabit this land is to transfer ownership of wealth-producing resources from government to thousands of individual Alaskans so that each of us

"I realize the necessary changes will not take place overnight, but certainly we must head in that direction."

can make our own choices, rather than to have them made for us by a handful of politicians and bureaucrats. By reducing government wealth and power, individual Alaskans will regain the freedoms we were meant to have.

- Freedom to own and control land and resources - both surface and subsurface;
- Freedom to choose a business or profession and operate it with no unnecessary harrassment from government regulatory agencies;
- Freedom to combine our own property and ingenuity to achieve success, and to keep the fruits of our own labor;
- Freedom, as adults, to decide what we consume, what we read or write, and to form whatever peaceful associations we choose;
- Freedom to choose between consumer alternatives which only the free market, not government monopoly, can provide;
- Freedom to educate our children in the way we see fit;
- Freedom from fear of government.

Most of us live in Alaska in pursuit of a dream - a dream of self-fulfillment, of personal enterprise and enjoyment of the pioneer spirit. We live here for the opportunity of tasting the thrill of achievement and success brought about by the effective use of our own intellect, talents and ambitions.

Our dream did not include the countless unnecessary permits, licenses, bonds, fees and numerous regulatory approvals required by a bloated state bureaucracy. It did not include a state mortgage on our homes, our businesses, our cars, our fishing boats and our children's education. Our dream did not include having government become the banker, employer and contractor to which we are forced to turn. It did not include owing our souls to the government store - but that is exactly where we are headed if we don't change directions.

Let's not trade our dreams, our hopes, and our futures for falsely perceived government security. Instead, let's consider what we can do together to restore our individual freedoms, and work together to make it happen. I realize that the necessary change will not take place overnight, but certainly we must head in the right direction.

Above all else, we must leave our children a permanent fund of freedom - freedom to think and to act; freedom to use the God-given resources around them to enrich their lives; freedom to succeed, and even freedom to fail; freedom to live - not just to exist.

There's nothing to it, but to do it. Let's do it!

Randolph book available now - meets with wide acclaim

In his new book, Freedom for Alaskans, Dick Randolph tells it like it is and how it should be. By applying Libertarian principles to his own life and important Alaskan issues, Dick explains to each reader how limiting the role of government and maximizing individual freedom will produce better lives for Alaskans.

Freedom for Alaskans is far from a typical "campaign book." Utilizing his eight years of legislative experience, Dick paints a realistic but seldom seen picture of our state government system, including its problems and his solutions to those problems. After reading Freedom for Alaskans, you'll never again view Alaskan politics and government the way you used to.

In the preface to Freedom for Alaskans Randolph warns that "because this book takes a frank and honest approach to Alaskan issues and dares to attack the political power establishment, you can expect

Remember November

Meet Dick Randolph

Dick Randolph has served eight years in the Alaska Legislature, and was re-elected as a Libertarian in 1980 with the highest vote total of any legislative candidate. Fairbanks voters know that Dick Randolph is the state's most effective legislator and will never trade away their individual freedoms for political gain.

Born 46 years ago in Salmon, Idaho, Dick's achieving nature has always enabled him to successfully face any challenge before him. Through his successful insurance business and many civic activities, Dick has come to understand the desire of Alaskans to pursue their goals in an atmosphere of individual freedom. This year he is running for Governor and he intends to win. When he does, each individual Alaskan will win as well.

The principle of the thing

Dick Randolph might have become governor more easily if he ran as a Democrat or Republican, but Dick accomplishes what he sets out to do because it's the right thing to do, not because it's the easy thing to do. Dick Randolph ran as a Libertarian because he believes that human nature requires us to be free.

Individuals should be allowed to act in whatever peaceful manner they choose so long as they respect the same rights of others. Government's only legitimate function is to protect those basic freedoms.

Dick Randolph believes the beauty of Alaska lies in its unique potential for individual fulfillment. The Alaskan dream includes the opportunity for each of us to acquire land, start a business, and raise our families as we see fit. That's what Alaska is all about. That's why Dick Randolph is running for Governor.

Taking the initiative

One individual, with the help of thousands of others, can make a difference. Dick Randolph has been making that difference in Alaska. When Dick discovered the Libertarian party in 1976, he realized that at last here was a party of principle, which was dedicated to restoring opportunity and freedom for the individual. With the help of thousands of Fairbanksans, Dick was elected to the Legislature as a Libertarian in 1978, and began promoting those principles. With the help of 21,000 other Alaskans, Dick Randolph placed the income tax repeal initiative on the election ballot, and travelled Alaska debating the issue. When Lt. Governor Terry Miller tried to remove the initiative from the ballot,

Dick took him to court. Dick pushed hard for a special session of the Legislature to repeal Alaska's personal income tax, and in September, 1980, he was finally successful. That resulted in you, as an individual, being able to keep more of your hardearned money to spend as you

Dick has also made a difference by rallying support behind his "Tundra rebellion" initiative which seeks to transfer most federal land in Alaska to state government, and eventually, to private ownership. Dick believes Alaskans, rather than bureaucrats in Washington, D.C., should decide what happens to Alaska's land and resources. The "Tundra rebellion" initiative will appear on the ballot in November to provide Alaskans the opportunity to tell Washington that we want self-determination and the

The track record

Dick Randolph has also made a difference in his role as a legislator. He has consistently introduced legislation which would reduce the wealth and power of government and increase individual freedom. Dick sees the accumulation of huge amounts of excess wealth by state government as the greatest threat to our freedoms. He has been a leader in finding ways to transfer wealth from government to individual Alaskans. Eventually, the wealth-producing resources themselves must be transferred to individuals so that the problem of surplus government wealth will be ended.

Dick has passed legislation calling for Alaskans to receive cost-of-living exemptions on federal income taxes. He also passed legislation allowing charities to sell pulltabs so that worthy causes can be financed by voluntary means rather than government expenditure. His only special interest is a very special one indeed - each individual's right to pursue his or her economic or personal life without government interference. We can make a difference. Let's help Dick Randolph make a difference as gover-

Dick Randolph will lead Alaskans with these clearly-defined goals:

Resolve the Capital Move Question

Either move the capital and constitutionally dedicate it to a new site, or constitutionally dedicate it to Juneau.

I have always been and remain in favor of moving the capital to a location more accessible for the vast majority of Alaskans, but only in manner which will result in increased efficiency and cost-savings over leaving it in Juneau. Therefore, if the people approve the ballot proposition in November, 1982, I will immediately implement that decision by the most expeditious means available, with a maximum emphasis on efficiency and private financing.

If the plan to move the capital to Willow is defeated, and if no con stitutional dedication to Juneau is approved in 1982, I will, as Governor, attempt to settle the issue once and for all in 1984. I will do so by placing the following two propositions on the 1984 ballot:

- A. Shall the capital be constitutionally dedicated to Juneau.
- B. Shall the capital be moved and constitutionally dedicated to a central location at a low cost where a collateral services are or can be available from the private sector.

Make Land Available

Land will be made available through aggressive implementation of an open-to-entry system based on homesteading principles where individuals can earn title to land. Lotteries, non-competitive leasing, and competitive bidding systems may be useful in some circumstances. The policy of the state classifying most good land so that it can not be made available for private ownership will be stopped. Actions already taken will be reversed wherever possible.

Eliminate Personal Taxes

As long as the state still owns wealth-producing resources and is receiving income directly from these, all personal and general corporate taxes should be repealed

Divest Government of Excess Wealth

Any revenue collected by the state that is not needed to provide necessary and appropriate services should be distributed to individual Alaskans in a fair, equitable and efficient manner. The Natural Resource trust is but one possible method! Eventually, private ownership of resources will eliminate the problem of continuing surplus government wealth.

Make Real Crime the Target

Alaska has one of the highest per capita violent crime rates in the country. This must be dealt with immediately and effectively by creating a Department of Criminal Justice and giving it the budgetary emphasis it deserves. Criminals must know that they will be caught, tried, convicted and dealt with according to their crime. The rights of the victim and restitution by the criminal for economic loss must be given much more consideration.

The emphasis of law enforcement activities must shift from the harassment of honest individuals involved in peaceful voluntary activities to dealing effectively with hard-core crimes such as murder, rape, and theft.

Protect Alaskans' Civil Liberties

In addition to working for economic freedom, Dick favors allowing adults to decide how to live their own personal lives without government interference so long as no one else's equal rights are violated. Examples: (1) guarantee of the right to free speech and expression; (2) freedom of choice in education by encouraging private education; (3) protection of the right to keep and bear arms; and (4) individual choice as to what to read or write, what to eat or drink, and to form whatever peaceful associations Alaskans choose.

Invest the Permanent Fund in Alaska

So long as it exists, the Permanent Fund should be used to give Alaskans the opportunity to develop Alaska. We must end the policy of investing the Permanent Fund outside

Reduce State Spending

Substantially reducing the size of our present state budget is mandatory. As more control of resources and wealth pass into the private economy, the role of government will be reduced naturally. I will propose spending reductions and back them with the veto.

Allow Private Ownership of Wealth-Producing Resources

All resources that are capable of producing wealth should be made available for private ownership. Government has no business being in business. In addition to oil, gas, coal and hard minerals, Alaska has immense renewable resource potential. Timber, agriculture, and aquaculture should be allowed to develop privately and recreationrelated interests should be encouraged.

Oppose Federal Usurpation of Alaskans' Rights

We will pursue the "Tundra Rebellion", working with other states to wrest control of land from the federal government. We will not tolerate another "Antiquities Act". I will work to end federal domination of our fisheries resources and destructive foreign harvest methods. We will end federal-shared revenues, which amounted to only about 1/25th of our total income last year, and we will also end the burdensome controls and costs associated with them.

Eliminate Indebtedness

When the state has a surplus of cash, a debt should not be left for future Alaskans. All present state and local bonded indebtedness should be paid.

Repeal Existing Subsistence Laws

Fish and game resources must be made available equally to everyone. It is imperative that we do not artificially create privileged classes of Alaskans. All Alaskans must have equal access to fish and game resources. Those who choose to live a true subsistence lifestyle, or who are in dire need of fish and game resources in the bush, can be accommodated as they have in the past, through sound resource management.

Dick Randolph's Positions Summarized

- Making more good private land ownership available
- Distributing surplus state wealth equitably to each Alaskan rather than to have government use it to
- Reducing state spending
- Dealing forcefully and effectively with criminals
- Supporting a state constitutional convention
- Moving the capital inexpensively
- Allowing equal access by all Alaskans to fish and game resources that there will be attempts to discredit it". He concludes the preface by saying, "As you will see from reading this book, I am not a 'redneck conservative'; I am not a 'bleeding heart liberal'; I am not a middle-of-theroad moderate. I am a Libertarian, and this book will show the difference."

You will find Freedom for Alaskans not only challenging and intriguing, but the most informative message of Alaskan politics ever printed. If you really want to make an informed choice for governor in 1982, Freedom for Alaskans is essential reading.
