During the July convention, Andrew Chadderdon ruled that the elections were not in order. I challenged his ruling multiple times but he refused to allow a vote on an appeal from the ruling of the chair. RONR requires the chair to facilitate this process.

My rights were violated when he refused to allow those votes. As a result the body was unable to deliberate on the issue. Had that happened, the body would've overruled him and found that voting was not against the bylaws.

I want the JC to acknowledge that he should've allowed the vote, which would've allowed the debate from the members that would've avoided this protracted situation we currently find ourselves in.

Further the JC should rule when an appeal from the ruling of the chair **must** be heard and prescribe a process for the convention body (or board) to adjudicate a situation where the chair thwarts the will of the body.

Pardon any typos, I'm driving while typing this.
