"STATE WILL PAY POLITICAL PIPERS"

(excerpted from the Asbury Park Press, June 19, by Adrain Jeffern, State House Bureau Chief).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR
As submitted and published in the Asbury Park Press, July 1977.

Editor Press: Now that the dust of the Gubernatorial primaries has settled we are presented with Brendan Byrne, "father of the income tax," and Ray Bateman, "father of the sales tax," who has also voted for income tax plans.

We also have another man running who is not part of the tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend, crowd. His name is Frank Primich, M.D., who is a practicing obstetrician who opposes the A.M.A. monopoly and is running under the Libertarian party banner.

Although Frank Primich does not expect to win this election, he will address issues such as the interim voucher system for education as a means of reducing escalating education costs and improving quality. The Republicrats will not touch this issue for fear of offending the NJEA monopoly.

Not a conservative, Dr. Primich hopes to enlist the support of small business, blacks, gays, and anyone else who has felt the heavy hand of government interfering with their ability to improve their homes, businesses, job opportunities and quality of life. In addition to pages of evasive double-talk from the other guys, I hope the Press will cover Dr. Primich. TOM PALVEN, Howell Twp.

Editor Press: I am the Libertarian Party's candidate for the State Assembly in the 10th district. Understandably, the Press sent its questionnaire to only one independent candidate for state office. Unlike many other independents, however, I am a serious candidate backed by an organized political party.

Since I did not have an opportunity to respond to the questionnaire, I would like to present my stand on taxes in this letter. Without qualification, I do not support, nor will support, either an extension of of the income tax or an increase in the sales tax. Despite the opinions of most state politicians, the state can function without these taxes.

Indeed, as the campaign moves into full swing, the Libertarian Party will argue that the state already spends far more than the taxpayers can justly be expected to finance.

Russell J. Malta, Ocean Twp.

New Jersey's election campaign for governor, which started the day after the June 7 party primaries, will be at public expense for the first time in the state's history.

Now a campaign financing law enacted in 1974 takes effect. It authorizes use of public funds so candidates for governor may conduct their campaigns free from improper influence and so that persons of limited financial means may seek election to the state's highest office.

The candidates will have to raise some money on their own, but most money spent for television and radio commercials, newspaper advertising, bumper stickers, billboards and other promotion schemes will come out of the state treasury.

With two major party candidates and 18 independents in the field, the campaign in theory could end up costing taxpayers $20 million. But $3 million is a more realistic estimate.

None of the independents is expected to be able to raise anywhere near the amount of private funds needed to qualify for a full state subsidy.

Once the candidate qualifies under the so-called $40,000 threshold rule, he is in line for public money - at a rate of $2 for every $1 he raises on his own.

Thus, if he manages to raise 500,000 on top of his initial $40,000, he will receive $1 million from the state over the course of the campaign, which will put him about at his limit.

According to the above article, we in New Jersey have been locked into a two party system. With the $40,000 requirement for state funding, it is highly unlikely that independent candidates will receive their share. This being the case the money needed for publicity and exposure in the attempt to compete with the two major parties, will be virtually nonexistent.

DANGEROUS DIALOGUE

WILLIAM F. REYNOLDS

JULY 4 1977

Answer to Libertarian Jumble: SLAVE MASTERS.

During the course of the last eight months, I have endeavored to write this column in the tone of a biting, distinctly sarcastic and sometimes cynical opponent of current trends in American society. The success of that aim I leave to the readers to decide. But, for this one issue, I am abandoning my contemptuous and taunting language; my scornful parodies; and my songs and games. In short, Darts and Daggers are impotent and inefficient weapons against an enemy who employs much more subtle forms of death-dealing devices.

To observe the Bicentennial of one year ago, Hal Cundari proposed the wearing of black arm bands symbolizing the death of freedom in this country rather than partaking in the gala celebrations which adorned the American continent and which have proven themselves to be devoid of all meaning consonant with the true spirit of the Fourth of July. Hal Cundari is a very perceptive individual. He is also an American in the tradition of Jefferson, Adams, Paine, Otis, Revere, Lee and Patrick Henry. These men were willing to die for freedom. Hal Cundari has demonstrated that he is willing to live for it.

I don't hear the ringing of bells across the land; the sound of marching bands; the snap of an American flag in the breeze; the invocations of the religious profession calling upon God to bless our nation; or patriotic music on the radio and television. I also do not hear anyone reading, in public, the Declaration of Independence (one of the most unknown documents in American history whose title is known but whose content and meaning is either unknown or grossly distorted).

I am observing the Fourth of July in the same manner that I have always done so. I read the Declaration of Independence. I listen to "patriotic" music (patriotic meaning the love of freedom and not necessarily the love of a country. Definitely not love for a country which has distorted the meaning of freedom). I barbeque for my family and friends who share the same ideas as myself. I become melancholy with memories of America's past history of freedom and I usually consume vast quantities of golden nectar.

Regardless of how anyone celebrates this holiday or any holiday or day of the week for that matter, everyone would do a great service for the cause of freedom if they would understand exactly what this holiday means and would apply the following excerpts from the Declaration of Independence to the situation which exists in our present day society:

"He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

"He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the Tenure of their Offices, and the Amount and Payment of their Salaries.

"He has erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent hither Swarms of Officers to harrass our People, and eat out their Substance.

"He has combined with others to subject us to a Jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution, and unacknowledged by our Laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation... (United Nations; NATO; OAS; IMF;)

"...For imposing Taxes on us without our consent...

"For depriving us, in many Cases, of the Benefits of Trial by Jury...

"For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments...

In every stage of these Oppressions we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble Terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated Injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the Ruler of a free People."

Our Founding Fathers resorted to the Final Alternative to secure freedom for themselves and succeeding generations. Will we have the courage to do the same?

PHYSICIAN FOLLOWS HIS GRUDGE INTO THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

by Judy Calendar, Press Staff Writer.

Monmouth Beach- Frank Primich refers to himself as a practical philosopher with a grudge.

A practicing obstetrician, Primich has decided to enter the political arena, partially because he wants to free health care from government control. His slogan, "They only promise, I deliver."

"Medicine and politics do not mix," said Primich, the Libertarian gubernatorial candidate. "Since politicians have chosen to intrude into my field of expertise, it seems reasonable that I enter theirs."

"There seems little doubt that I could do a damned sight better job replacing them than they could replacing me," he said.

Primich says he is "incensed at the current fiasco health agencies have created" and stresses that health care should not be financed by any government agency.

"Perhaps the programs would be more aptly entitled political medicine," Primich contended. "The biggest fraud in Medicaid is the concept under which it was conceived."

Primich attributes soaring medical costs and a grossly decreased quality of care to the "American-style of socialized medicine."

Although he can offer no immediate solution, Primich a West New York doctor, suggests that government salaried employees practice medicine in the inner cities, "and the rest of us could go about our business without government intervention."

"That type of program would attract many doctors with altruistic ideals and others to whom this type of career would be attractive," he said. "Then the majority of practicing physicians would not be held responsible for inherent failures in the system. The government could solve the problems in the inner cities or shut up."

As a matter of fact, Libertarians would concede to government only the power necessary to protect individual economic and civil rights from force and fraud.

"WE WANT minimum government interference in our lives because we pay a horrendous service charge for supposed helpful guidance," he said. "Everybody is 85% Libertarian; they just don't know it yet."

Primich, 55 and the father of two college students, contends that the major stumbling block the Libertarian Party must overcome is "that one pet thing. The one thing that people get back for all the money they pay in-like social security or a tax break. For some reason people hold onto the system for that one small thing."

For instance, he said, college students are very receptive to the Libertarian philosophy "until we tell them we're against government subsidy to education."

"But with our route, you may lose that 15 per cent benefit but you'll gain the rest of the 85 per cent," Primich said.

Primich said that although the time is past to repeal the income tax, if elected he would do his best to do away with it entirely after the present structure self-destructs in July.

If the Legislature presented even a modified income tax I would veto it," he said. "And if they had the brass to override the veto I would extend executive clemency to anyone who didn't pay the tax."

In order to solve the problem of financing schools, Primich said he would support a voucher concept where taxpayers could decide to what educational institution their portion of the school tax would be applied.

"This would bring back competition in education which would decrease cost and improve quality," he said. "The government could no longer stifle education."

Primich believes that "force feeding in education" is unnecessary and unrealistic and urges a return to the basics-reading, writing and arithmetic.

"The idea that education can be instilled is a ridiculous myth," he said. "Many people would do much better outside the educational system. You don't need to know Greek to grow potatoes."

PERSONALLY, Primich says he concedes the right to women to have abortions in the first three months of pregnancy, but maintains they do not have the right to demand a doctor perform it.

"If a woman can secure voluntary service, then fine," he said. "Abortion in the first three months is only bad when it is outlawed and done in back rooms."

But, he said, he is against abortions

LIBERTARIANS NAME CANDIDATES

ENGLISHTOWN - Ron Wishart, chairman of the Monmouth County Libertarian Party, has announced the Libertarian slate of candidates for public office in Monmouth County.

Lucille Bender of Ocean Township is Libertarian candidate for freeholder. She operates a nursery school in Long Branch and ran for freeholder once before.

Walter Swirsky, Manalapan, Libertarian candidate for sheriff is a sales consultant and training manager and has previously campaigned for Congress.

In the legislative races, Russ Malta, a Princeton University student from Ocean Township is the Party's candidate in the 10th district. The 11th district Senate candidate is Anne Reicker, a housewife from Sea Bright, the 11th district Assembly candidate is Elizabeth Macron of Freehold Township who graduated from Douglass College this year, and candidates in the 12 district are Jack Moyers of Matawan Township for Senate and Steve Enterline of Matawan for Assembly.

Moyers is a salesman and has previously run for Congress while Enterline works for a metal processing company and was previously elected to the Matawan Council.

The only Libertarian candidate for local office is Jeanne Macron, running for the Freehold Township Committee.

Heading the ticket for governor is Frank Primich of North Bergen, an obstetrician, running with the slogan, "Others promise, he delivers."

being performed after the first three months of pregnancy.

Primich says he is "vehemently opposed" to abortion in the third trimester of pregnancy.

"If the intent is to destroy the fetus, then it is far safer to deliver the child and hit it with a hammer," he said. "Abortion in the third trimester is an overt effort to ensure the child does not live."

He is opposed to federal and state financing of abortions because "then the individual who objects to abortion is being forced to pay for it against his moral principles."

Because he is against land and sea use restrictions, Primich would not oppose offshore drilling.

"I feel we are all free to indulge ourselves as long as you don't interfere with others' rights," he explained. "Oil companies would be financially responsible for any damage caused by oil spills or similar problems."

He suggested that before any offshore drilling be allowed however, the oil companies be required to post bonds to pay for damages.

"Irresponsible persons are polluting us now and we can't do anything," he said.

He advocates the repeal of laws against victimless crimes, such as possession of marijuana. (continued)

"We must do away with the unfair prosecution of individuals who in privacy pursue happiness in whatever form it might take," he said.

Repeal of victimless crimes would free law enforcement officers to punish perpetrators of crimes of force and fraud, he said.

Primich also feels politicians should be accountable for their actions and therefore advocates a "recall system," which would allow voters to oust politicians from office before finishing their terms.

"Any elected official who abandons his campaign promises without the voters' consent could be taken to task," he said. "I wish that were required right now. We probably wouldn't have many politicians in office."

LET THOSE WHO RIDE DECIDE !

On Saturday, June 25th, an estimated 800- to 1,000 bikers gathered in front of the State House in Trenton to protest the law requiring mandatory wearing of helmets.

Dr. Frank Primich donned in a cowboy hat labeled "good guys" made an impressive speech. First off he established that his running for governor on the Libertarian Party ticket was actually a matter of survival due to government's excessive growth and power. Neither Byrne nor Bateman are the solution.

He claimed that protests and rallies by bikers and other state-oppressed minorities could lead to "delusions of false accomplishment," that their real answer lay in only one political party and its gubernatorial candidate....The Libertarian Party....the one that was on their side long before the helmet laws repeal became fashionable.

Nothing in the world, Primich pointed out, including air and water couldn't be hazardous or lethal under some circumstances. The helmet's major negative is the restriction of the normal mobility of the neck, due mainly to the chin strap. With politicians' mentality he chided, the strap would be banned and the "helmet glued or nailed on to the head."

The question ultimately is "who owns your life?" The choice to ride with or without the helmet must be left to the individual.

He, Primich, concluded that freedom requires a lot of hard work to undo years of unnecessary state rules and regulations.

So with humor and a lot of sense, Primich was received with cheers, handshakes and words of encouragement.

Four other speakers, all directly involved with the cyclists' cause, stressed unity. Bikers and their families represent the state's largest voting block (over 100,000). One speaker, Kelly Wendon led a five year fight in Wichita, Kansas to successfully repeal its helmet law. He cited its unconstitutionality. "We never gave government the power to force us to protect ourselves."

Reported by Rand Angelicola.

The following is a continuation of the Libertarian Party proposed planks to be voted upon at our next year's annual convention. As mentioned in the May issue, this will be a regular feature in the newsletter for the remainder of the year.

PROTECTION OF PRIVACY

The individual's privacy, property, and the right to speak or not to speak should not be infringed by the government. No Congressional committee, governmental agency, or grand jury shall have the power to compel any person to appear or testify. The government should not use electronic or other means of covert surveillance of an individual's actions on private property without the consent of that individual. Government-mandated record keeping is a form of involuntary servitude and should be abolished. Correspondence, bank and other financial transactions and records, doctor's and lawyers' communications, employment and other voluntarily kept records should not be open to review by government without the consent of all parties involved in these records. So long as the National Census and all other federal, State, and local government agency compilations of data on individuals continue to exist, they should be conducted only with the consent of the persons from or about whom the data are sought.

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

We defend the rights of individuals to engage or not engage in any religious activities which do not violate the rights of others. In order to defend religious freedoms, we advocate a strict separation of church and state. We oppose government actions which either aid or attack any religion. We oppose taxation of church property for the same reason we oppose all taxation.

INVOLUNTARY COMMITMENT AND MENTAL HEALTH

We oppose the involuntary commitment of any person to a mental institution. We advocate:

1. The repeal of all laws permitting involuntary psychiatric treatment of any persons, including children and those incarcerated in prisons and mental institutions.
2. An immediate end to the spending of tax money for any program of psychiatric or psychological research or treatment.
3. An end to all involuntary treatments of prisoners by such means as psycho-surgery, drug therapy, behavior modification, and aversion therapy.
4. An end to tax supported "mental health" propaganda campaigns and community "mental health" centers and programs.

DEFENDING THE UNDEFENDABLE

by Walter Block

Fleet Press,
$9.95

Across the jacket of this book is written "Something to Offend Everyone" and a list of those who Walter Block would defend. Among these are the pimp, prostitute and gypsy cab driver. When I saw on the list that "the litterer" and "person who yells fire in a crowded theatre" would be defended, I thought "Yes, I'll be offended too." However, Prof. Block's "defense" of these people is a little misleading. Rather than defend them, he presents economic explanations of how to solve these problems in solid libertarian terms.

One might presume that a book arguing extreme cases would not be an effective recruiting tool. This has not been my experience. Some non-libertarian friends who have leafed through it have been impressed, and several people in my office passed it around and were delighted by it, one woman taking it home to show her husband. Another very liberal, pro-environment, past McGovern supporter who I have been working on for years, said after leafing through it, "Tom, you're going to make libertarians out of all of us."

I may or may not make a libertarian out of anyone, but I think Walter Block's book can. However, believers in God-given rights and God-given rules of conduct may be offended. The book may cause the loss of some soft support among these people, but it may also cause other conservatives to rethink their beliefs. For instance, Block draws on no supernatural support for his defense of prostitution but rather provides a compelling defense in social and economic terms.

Murray Rothbard's forward to the book, where he explains the use of the term "heroes" to describe the "undefendables," is a valuable contribution. Each chapter is illustrated with a clever, full-page cartoon. DEFENDING THE UNDEFENDABLE has been highly praised by many "good libertarians" and attacked by others. I suggest your reading it and deciding for yourself.

BIG GOVERNMENT

Editor, The Record;

Your morning-after Editorial, June 8th bodes ill for any of your readership who might still expect intelligent conclusions to be drawn from you analysis of the political scene.

Byrne and Bateman are aptly described as having grave shortcomings, but you conclude, "There will be no occasion for complaint this year about a lack of choice." May I be the first to register such a complaint.

The choice you assume the electorate to accept is between a Demagogue and a Republicrat. This is like asking a starving man to choose between toadstools and choke-cherries.

Brendan Byrne, with the charisma of a turtle, and a voice to match, will use his supposed integrity. His challenge to debate is a political ploy, in hope that his evasiveness will out-score Ray Bateman's inconsistency. Brendan's debating technique, to date, has been to rudely interrupt his opponent at every opportunity, and to answer questions with what amounts to double-talk.

As a glaring example, Byrne was a keynote speaker at the recent Annual Convention of the medical Society of New Jersey. He claimed to support a $ 125,000,000 bond issue to expand the medical teaching facilities in New Jersey. The floor microphones were turned off, and all questions, in this supposed discussion had to be submitted in writing. My question, regarding the ultimate cost to the taxpayers, was among the few he had time to "answer." He stated that since this bond issue would be at a lower rate of interest than previous bonds, the taxpayers would actually be saving money. I was ruled out of order for rising to protest this utter lack of logic. The saddest part of this incident was the fact that most of my illustrious colleagues never realized what he had done.

Since the above mentioned meeting was in Atlantic City, the Governor had to leave early in order to publicly restate his promise to keep "The Mob" out of the Las Vegas of the East. If he succeeds it will be the first time that disorganized crime beat the organized variety.

I have met Ray Bateman once, and found him extremely likeable. He is portrayed as a master of compromise. Politically, that may well be an attribute. It could help get one elected, and facilitate the passage of certain pieces of legislation, but would have little, if any, benefit in solving the problems that plague our State.

All the issues that call for resolution are traceable as being caused or aggravated by a single factor; TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT.

Both major party candidates, unfortunately, are committed to maintain and expand that malignant power structure. The only choice being offered are, "Which pocket do you want picked?" and "What would you like your money misspent to support?"

The Libertarian Party, since its modest beginning in 1971, has already grown to the third largest Party at the polls, both nationally and in New Jersey. This has been due to our commitment to diminish the size, cost, and power of government. Given the opportunity to understand the Libertarian platform, people consistently find it far more attractive than the common choices. Relegation of my candidacy to the same category as the seventeen also-rans who have filed for the November election is a disservice to your readers.

The Record boasts of its aim to inform the Public. I merely ask that you not arbitrarily practice censorship by exclusion.

If there is to be discussion of the issues, let the people read about both sides, rather than two variation on the same theme.

If there is to be direct debate, I hereby challenge Mr. Byrne and Mr. Bateman to a confrontation that would enlighten the voters.

Very truly yours,
Frank J. Primich, M.D.

GOVERNMENT AS BOOKIE

"No one but a fool would gamble with state - run operations," says Cornell Prof. G. Robert Blakey, who conducted a two-year lottery study for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. Consumer's Union concluded "lotteries are a legal sucker bet."

Critics question whether "making book" - enticing citizens into gambling with such slogans as "Play Me." "Diamond Dollars: and "50¢ can make you a million " - is a proper function of government.

Be that as it may, the tawdry spectacle of Government as Bookie seems likely to continue and expand as politicians - reacting to public pressure - seek an escape from new or higher taxes. Patronage appointees, state lottery bureaucracies, vendors and consultants will provide political muscle and needed cash in political battles. Only a chain of horrendous scandals killed off the state lotteries of the 19th century. It will probably require the same in ours.

The above was excerpted from an article written by Neal R. Pierce, and appeared in the A. P. Press, Sun. 6/19/77.

Statement of Principles

NEW JERSEY LIBERTARIAN PARTY
 P.O. Box 247
 Bernardsville, New Jersey 07924

Membership Application

We, the members of the Libertarian Party, challenge the cult of the omnipotent state and defend the rights of the individual.

We hold that all individuals have the right to exercise sole dominion over their own lives, and have the right to live in whatever manner they choose, so long as they do not forcibly interfere with the equal right of others to live in whatever manner they choose.

Governments throughout history have regularly operated on the opposite principle, that the State has the right to dispose of the lives of individuals and the fruits of their labor. Even within the United States, all political parties other than our own grant to government the right to regulate the lives of individuals and seize the fruits of their labor without their consent.

We, on the contrary, deny the right of any government to do these things, and hold that where governments exist, they must not violate the rights of any individual: namely, (1) the right to life - accordingly we support prohibition of the initiation of physical force against others; (2) the right to liberty of speech and action - accordingly we oppose all attempts by government to abridge the freedom of speech and press, as well as government censorship in any form; and (3) the right to property - accordingly we oppose all government interference with private property, such as confiscation, nationalization, and eminent domain, and support the prohibition of robbery, trespass, fraud, and misrepresentation.

Since governments, when instituted, must not violate individual rights, we oppose all interference by government in the areas of voluntary and contractual relations among individuals. People should not be forced to sacrifice their lives and property for the benefit of others. They should be left free by government to deal with one another as free traders; and the resultant economic system, the only one compatible with the protection of individual rights, is the free market.

Primich Confident 'Loser'

NORTH BERGEN—Dr. Frank Primich, the Libertarian gubernatorial candidate, considers himself a political "blocking back on a worthy team which will eventually win the ball game."

Nominated last week, Dr. Primich says he realizes that he can not win the governor's seat this year. "But you must remember the socialists never elected a candidate but turned this country into a socialistic state," he said.

The Governor's Race

"Perhaps I'm serving more as an educator, during a time when people are more and more receptive to individual freedom," he continued.

The Libertarian philosophy places emphasis upon protection of civil liberties and limits the role of government to that of a watchdog against force and fraud.

Libertarians oppose all forms of public ownership and all government sponsored social welfare programs.

Dr. Primich, a practicing obstetrician and gynecologist, could not be present to accept the Libertarian nomination because he was delivering a baby at the time.

"But I made it here with a delayed acceptance speech," he said.

Primich said he would consider repeal of the state income tax and prohibiting the "encroachment of politicians and bureaucrats" into health care as his first priorities.

The candidate maintains that the income tax is not necessary to support school systems and proposes that current educational concepts be revamped.

"The idea that pouring more money into the system is not the answer," he said. "My concept is that the key thing to learning is incentive."

Programs such as the "thorough and efficient" education law promote "spoon feeding," Primich maintains. "This type of thing permeates our whole system - that big brother is going to do it all for us. The result is inferior education and no incentive."

Dr. Primich, who is the father of two, says his symbol throughout the campaign will be a pair of scissors "with a pledge to cut the budget and cut the red tape."

Government interference in medical programs has resulted in "cookbook medication" that has caused health care prices to escalate, he maintains.

Because of programs such as Medicare, patients are given "a $100 worth of unnecessary tests when all they need is two aspirin and little advice," Primich says. "I would like to change that."

Primich contends that a society regulated by state imposed standards has created "the situation where welfare and indigency becomes a career."

"We promise no one anything for nothing," he said. "You work for it, you earn it, and you have the privilege to spend it," he stressed. "This privilege includes indulging your humane attitudes and Libertarians are perhaps more humane than the bleeding hearts."

"No one would starve if we followed these principals," he said.

Gubernatorial hopefuls

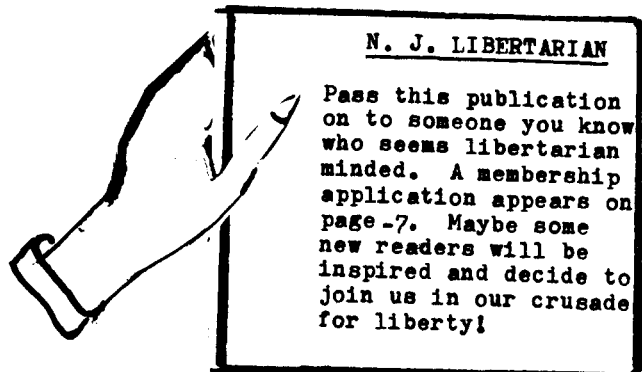

On hand last night to address the New Jersey businessmen and executives at the annual State Employer Legislative Committee's dinner were five gubernatorial aspirants, (from left) Democrat Joseph A. Hoffman, who is former state labor-industry commissioner, Libertarian Frank Primich, Republicans Robert Sarcone and William Angus and Independent Democrat Richard McLeer. The candidates were invited to the dinner at the Pines Mahor, Edison, to present their plans to stimulate the state's lagging economy to the 1,800-member business organization.

From the Editor: Dear Readers, If I seem predjudice in printing material about the county of Monmouth and its attempt to reach the public via the mass media, I take neither blame nor credit. It is obvious that our county has worked very hard in getting a large and full slate of candidates for the November election. As I am a resident of Monmouth, I have the opportunity to witness and extract the news that the Libertarian party has made in our county. However, I am sure that there is a great deal going on in all areas of our state regarding our party's attempts to enlighten its people. I would be delighted to print all pertinent letters, editorials, and press releases as they appear in local publications. But as I've no access to this material, I cannot do so. I hope that you, our readers and supporters will take the time to send me any information regarding local events and letters, as well as candidate's campaign news, and anything else that you regard to be in the interest of other Libertarians.

To all of you who are involved in the Primich for governor, please accept my congratulations on the exciting campaign that you are running. We do seem to be getting coverage in local papers and Dr. Primich is certainly gaining recognition and publicity for our party. Thanks for the info that some of you have been sending in regarding the various events and happenings that Dr. Primich has been involved in.

LIBERTARIAN PARTY

Statement of Principles

We, the members of the Libertarian Party, challenge the cult of the omnipotent state and defend the rights of the individual.

We hold that all individuals have the right to exercise sole dominion over their own lives, and have the right to live in whatever manner they choose, so long as they do not forcibly interfere with the equal right of others to live in whatever manner they choose.

"The purpose of the NJLP is to organize the means for promoting libertarian ideals and institutions."

Governments throughout history have regularly operated on the opposite principle, that the State has the right to dispose of the lives of individuals and the fruits of their labor. Even within the United States, all political parties other than our own grant to government the right to regulate the lives of individuals and seize the fruits of their labor without their consent.

We, on the contrary, deny the right of any government to do these things, and hold that where governments exist, they must not violate the rights of any individual; namely, (1) the right to life - accordingly we support prohibition of the initiation of physical force against others; (2) the right to liberty of speech and action - accordingly we oppose all attempts by government to abridge the freedom of speech and press, as well as government censorship in any form; and (3) the right to property - accordingly we oppose all government interference with private property, such as confiscation, nationalization, and eminent domain, and support the prohibition of robbery, trespass, fraud, and misrepresentation.

Since governments, when instituted, must not violate individual rights, we oppose all interference by government in the areas of voluntary and contractual relations among individuals. People should not be forced to sacrifice their lives and property for the benefit of others. They should be left free by government to deal with one another as free traders, and the resultant economic system, the only one compatible with the protection of individual rights, is the free market.
