And still not.

Though I'm in bed too I'll to sleep I did put you guys on notice that I intended to release the IC report to my derivative suit attorneys 7 days before a responsive pleading is due. Not publicly.

However I am putting you on notice also that I will be providing it to any defense counsel I may have for trial (not same firm said that from beginning) within 10 days of this email. File a motion for protective order if you object. It would only be for use at trial.

I do NOT consent to its public release as it has outright lies from at least one person on the LNC in it and libels about a dozen others. Those will be dealt with in trial.

IF I have an attorney for trial they cannot defend me without it. But that is not public.

As far as the false charges they are already public.

I once again demand my access back.

It does. The rights violations keep adding up.

My understanding was it had to be like certified mail.
